

HOUSE REBELS AGAINST NEW DEAL SPENDING, CUTS RELIEF APPROPRIATION TO $750,000,000

Budget of County Includes City's Share of Relief Load

YEAR'S EXPENSES
SET AT $767,225,
$225,000 HIGHER

Commissioners, Social Planning Council Heat-
edly Clash Over County
Assuming All of Burden

PLIGHT OF NEEDY
REMAINS IN DOUBT

Proposed Budget Provides 1939 Tax Levy of 13 Mills, 3 for Relief.

The 1939 Fulton county budget contemplates the county assuming the entire local relief load and tentative allocations prepared by James L. Respass, of Respass and Respass, county auditors, sets the current year's relief expenditures at $767,225 as compared to $542, 170.33 for 1938.

Budgetary provisions were learned yesterday following a heated clash between Fulton county commissioners and leaders of the social planning council over whether relief is solely the responsibility of the county or a joint obligation of the county and the municipality.

Although the plight of the 23-000 on various Fulton relief rolls was left ostensibly unchanged after the arguments, with commissioners contending that removal of legislative restrictions is a condition precedent to assumption of the entire relief burden by the county, the inclusion of the additional $225,000 for the new year indicated that commissioners consider a liberalization of existing laws imminent.

To Study Figures.
Commissioners also voted $48-000 for relief—the total amount necessary to pay all local governments' shares of the expense for the current month.

A study of the figures offered by Respass will be begun at 9:30 o'clock this morning by commissioners, and a comparison of expenditures for 1937 and 1938 and the estimated figures for 1939 were placed late yesterday into the hands of commissioners.

The proposed 1939 budget also provides that the 1939 tax levy shall be 13 mills as compared to 12 1-2 for 1938 and 10 mills for 1937.

Three mills of the 1939 rate will be devoted to relief purposes, it was indicated, if and when legislative restrictions are lifted to permit the county to expend funds for unemployable and unassigned employable relief, the major matter of contention at yesterday's hearing.

It was pointed out that the county itself would revert to an actual 10-mill operation and maintenance basis for 1939, but that if the entire relief load is assumed, an additional three mills will be mandatory to finance it.

Total county expenses for 1939
as carried in the proposed Res-pass budget would be $4,286,688.72 for all purposes as compared to $4,262,018.86 for 1938, and $3,939-
188.73 for 1937.

Fulton county commissioners yesterday accepted "with regret"
the resignation of Commissioner
George F. Longino, and Ordinary Thomas H. Jeffries immediately set February 9 as the date for a special election to fill the unexpected term.

Five persons already have announced for the post and trial balloons were being launched in feverish haste by more than a score of others. The five who announced for the post even before the date for the election had been set were:

who made his intentions known from Chicago, where he is on a business trip; R. H. Harrison, Buckhead, and Mayor J. R. Par-dominate East Point politics, said he would be a candidate in 1940.

German-U. S. Relations Eased By Agreement on American Jews

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP)—

Germany and the United States, though completely at odds on Germany's "right" to discriminate against American Jews in Germany, appeared today to have reached a practical solution for a controversy that has added tension to the disturbed relations between them.

An exchange of notes between the two governments released this afternoon by the State Department disclosed:

1—The United States again declined to recognize Germany's right to apply to American Jews in Germany treatment not applied to other American citizens.

2—Germany declared there was nothing in international law to prevent her from doing so.

3—Germany, however, agreed to

Speaker Declares Setup
Will Aid Materially in Ironing Out Difficulties

With every section of the state and virtually every faction in the assembly gaining recognition, Speaker Roy V. Harris of the house of representatives yesterday announced chairmen of the 60 committees which will steer affairs of the house during the present regular session and at any extra sessions to come in the last two years of Rivers' administration.

Although chairmanships of the most important groups in the house were announced earlier in the week, the list made public last night by Speaker Harris has been awaited with deep interest by individuals and groups interested in various legislation to come up during the session.

"We have tried to place the best men in the best available positions," Speaker Harris said. "I believe we have struck upon a series of combinations which will aid materially in ironing out any difficulties which may arise during the session. Of course we could not satisfy the desires of all members for chairmanships but we did our best to make everyone feel that they have a part in carrying out the legislative program."

Kendrick Appointed.
Speaker Harris said the full committee lists would not be available before Monday.

Important among the assignments revealed yesterday were the appointments of Cicero Kendrick, of Fulton, to head the committee on industrial relations and Augustine Sams, of DeKalb, to be chairman of the committee on municipal government.

Representative Wilmer D. Lannier, of Richmond, again heads the No. 1 committee on constitutional amendments, while Representative James V. Carmichael, of Cobb county, heads the No. 2 committee.

Representative W. H. Lovett, of Laurens, is chairman of the committee on public highways No. 1, while the No. 2 committee chairmanship goes to Representative
John Drake, of Seminole.

The veteran Representative David S. Atkinson, of Chatham, heads general judiciary No. 1,
while Representative Roy Mc-Graw, of Meriwether, heads "jud-
No. 2." Representative B. C.

Hays, of Miller county, is the chairman of the special judiciary committee.

Governor Rivers' chief of military staff, Colonel W. F. Scott, of Thomas, is the new chairman of the committee on county and county matters, a committee which handles major local bills. Scott also is secretary to the powerful rules committee.

Representative Mell Turner, of DeKalb, was elevated to the important post of chairman of the insurance committee while Representative Ed L. Almond, of Walton, was renamed head of the penitentiary committee.

The No. 1 committee on agriculture is headed by Representative Jim Swindle, of Berrien, while the
No. 2 committee is under the chairmanship of Representative Herschel Reid, of Carroll.

Representative W. W. (Bozey) Flanders, of Emanuel county, was renamed chairman of the committee on banks and banking, a post
he has held for the last two years.

The two committees on educa-

Scarlett Officially Named! English Actress Wins Role

Selznick Picks Young
London Star, Vivien
Leigh, for Coveted Role
After Two-Year Hunt.

CHOICE REVEALED
BY MISS MITCHELL

Leslie Howard Named
Ashley Wilkes and Olivia
De Havilland, Melanie

By LEE FUHRMAN.
(Copyright, 1939, for The Constitution.)

Well, it's over—

A wisp of an Irish lass, with an elfin face, dark tresses with a slight trace of red, and a wasp-like waist, was officially chosen last night to play the coveted screen role of Scarlett O'Hara in the film version of Margaret Mitchell's famous novel, "Gone With the Wind."

She is Vivien Leigh, five-foot three, dark-complexioned, 24 years old, vivacious, and a comparative unknown in American films. But her background includes appearances in many British films and roles on English stages.

Leslie Howard Chosen.

Coincident with announcement of the selection of Miss Leigh, after a two-year search for "just the right actress," was the news that Leslie Howard would play the role of Ashley Wilkes, and Olivia de Havilland would be cast as Melanie.

From the lips of Margaret Mitchell herself came confirmation of the Hollywood announcements and expressions of delight that her best-selling story of the days of the War Between the States would soon be filmed.

"I'm mighty happy about it,"
said Miss Mitchell, the Atlanta author, whose small features and figure have something elfin in them, too.

Miss Mitchell brought to the editorial offices of The Constitution the telegrams she received last night which told her the news of the important casting. The messages were from David O. Selznick, of Selznick
International Pictures, Inc., who bought film rights to the book which blew a gale of sales in the publishing world.

"I've always had a lot of confidence in Mr. Selznick," continued Miss Mitchell. "In the past, he has always taken his time in choosing leading roles for his pictures, and has always taken pains with backgrounds, especially if the film was historical."

Miss Mitchell Pleased.

Miss Mitchell viewed a picture of Miss Leigh, who played the little bookshop clerk who sought to capture Robert Taylor in "A Yank at Oxford," and who was chosen for the Scarlett role over two other well-known finalists, Jean Arthur and Paulette Goddard, and said:

"She certainly is pretty. Naturally, I'm the only person in the world who really knows what Scarlett looks like, but this girl looks charming. She has the most Irish look I've ever seen, with a 'devil' in her eyes. She looks like she has plenty of spirit and fire. Not at all like a languid Hollywood girl."

Miss Leigh is hardly the latter, however. She was born in Darjeeling, India, in 1913, and,
like the Scarlett of the novel,
is of French and Irish descent.
She was educated in Europe, and appeared in numerous stage plays in England.

More recently she appeared in the Alexander Korda productions, "Fire Over England,"
"Storm in a Tea Cup" and "A Yank at Oxford," which was made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in England.

In private life Miss Leigh is

Here Is 'Gone With the Wind' Telegram to Author

Vivien Leigh Selected for Scarlett Closely Resembles Heroine in Ancestry and Characteristics.

Here is the telegram received last night by Miss Margaret Mitchell announcing the selection of the cast for the movie version of "Gone With the Wind."

Mrs. John R. Marsh,
4 E. Seventeenth St., N. E.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Miss Mitchell:

Following is the Scarlett announcement:

"Vivien Leigh, whose father is French and whose mother Irish, will play the role of Scarlett O'Hara, whose father was Irish and mother French."

"The selection of Miss Leigh by David O. Selznick, president of Selznick International Pictures, Inc., yesterday brought to a close the two-year controversy over the selection of a Scarlett for Margaret Mitchell's 'Gone With the Wind.'"

"Choice of Miss Leigh was based upon tests directed by George Cukor, who will direct the picture. Clark Gable already has been announced for the role of Rhett Butler and with the screen play by Sidney Howard and Oliver H. P. Garrett completed, Selznick has the stage set for the beginning of production. The picture, to be filmed entirely in technicolor, goes before the camera within the next two weeks."

Resembles Scarlett.
"In her physical characteristics as well as her ancestry, Miss Leigh resembles the heroine of Miss Mitchell's book. She is five feet three, weighs 103 pounds, has green eyes, black hair with a touch of red, and even possesses Scarlett's pointed chin."

"Miss Leigh is a newcomer to American production, but has had some experience in English studios. For Alexander Korda, she played in 'Fire Over England,' and 'Storm in a Teacup.' More recently she was seen in 'A Yank at Oxford,' produced by MGM in London."

"Prior to her recent screen work, Miss Leigh had a great deal of experience on the stage, having played leads in 'The Mask of Virtue,' 'The Happy Hypocrite,' 'Henry VIII,' 'Bats in the Belfry,' 'Because We Must,' and 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.'"

"She has been under contract to Alexander Korda, but under the terms of her contract for Selznick, and by arrangement with Mr. Korda, she will be under exclusive contract for the future to Selznick International, except for one picture yearly which she will make in England for Mr. Korda."

Mother of Daughter.
"In private life Miss Leigh is Mrs. Leigh Holman, wife of a London barrister and mother of a five-year-old daughter, Suzanne."

"Miss Leigh was born in Darjeeling, India, at the foot of Mt. Everest, on November 5, 1913, daughter of Ernest Richard Hartley, stock broker, of French descent, and Gertrude Robinson Hartley, born in Ireland. She was schooled in Paris, London, Switzerland, Italy and Germany."

"At the age of 15, as a student in Miss Manille's School in Paris, Miss Leigh was taught dramatics by an actress of the Comedie Francaise. She was given a chance to try her talent in school productions of Victor Hugo's plays, and her aptitude brought urgings to continue dramatic studies."

"Three years later, Miss Leigh entered the Academy of Dramatic Art, in London, to study for her career. A year later she met and married Holman, returning to school after the honeymoon."

"Before she got the chance to play her first professional acting role, Miss Leigh found herself concerned with the more important real life role of a mother. Once the care of little Suzanne was well arranged, however, Miss Leigh went out to prove to herself that her earlier ambitions had been justified."

"Starting slowly, Miss Leigh took what small parts she could get. She was given her first big opportunity on the stage when Sydney Carroll gave her a role in his production, 'The Mask of Virtue,'

This is Olivia de Havilland, talented young American actress, who has been selected for the role of "Melanie" in the long-awaited production of "Gone With the Wind."

Leslie Howard, English stage and screen star long popular in this country, has officially been selected as "Ashley Wilkes" in the screen version of "Gone With the Wind."

at the Ambassadors theater.

"In making her Hollywood debut for Selznick International, she goes into the most widely discussed role in the history of motion pictures. Literally thousands of actresses and nonprofessionals were considered for the role. The search included the efforts of talent scouting units in all parts of the country, especially in the south.

"Due to the importance of the role, most of the major stars in motion pictures have at one time or another been considered, but Selznick continued to hope for a girl who was not identified in the minds of the public with other roles, a girl who would not have to subordinate a previously established personality in the creation of Scarlett O'Hara.

"Some months ago it was announced that January 15 had been set as a deadline for the selection, and as the time limit drew to a close the choice appeared narrowed down to a few players. Miss Leigh appeared at the studio, hoping, but little daring to believe that she would be considered for the role.

"At the moment when the fire scenes were made and in the open air Greek theater at Berkeley, she was introduced to Selznick when the fire was at its height. He was immediately impressed by her physical resemblance to the Scarlett of Miss Mitchell's creation and acting tests were promptly arranged.

"Miss Leigh's name is pronounced as though spelled 'Lee'." (Signed) David O. Selznick.

Olivia de Havilland Called 'Find' Of Max Reinhardt in Hollywood

Here is the direct-from-the-studio life story of Olivia de Havilland, who will play Melanie in the film version of "Gone With the Wind," which was received last night by Margaret Mitchell from David O. Selznick, film producer:

Mrs. John R. Marsh,
4 East Seventeenth Street, N. E.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Miss Mitchell:

Releasing following story on Melanie:

"Another popular choice for one of the top roles in 'Gone With the Wind' was placed under contract today by David O. Selznick, producer of the screen version of Margaret Mitchell's world-famous novel."

"Olivia de Havilland, the girl discovered by Max Reinhardt in his Hollywood Bowl production of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream,' was signed to play Melanie Wilkes, the patient, loyal and devoted wife of Ashley Wilkes and friend of Scarlett O'Hara."

Completed Cast.
"With the signing of Miss de Havilland, whose rise to stardom is one of Hollywood's most unusual success stories, the cast of 'Gone With the Wind' was lined up as follows:

"Vivien Leigh as Scarlett, Clark Gable as Rhett Butler, Leslie Howard as Ashley Wilkes and Miss de Havilland as Melanie."

"During the summer of 1935, Miss de Havilland, then living in Saratoga, Cal., made her bid for an acting career by getting a job as second understudy in the role of 'Hermia' in 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.' Both the star and the first understudy were forced to leave the production before opening night. Producer-Director Reinhardt saw in the second understudy potential star material. He gave Miss de Havilland the role.

"From a triumphant series of performances in the Hollywood Bowl, the young actress went on with equal success to productions of 'The Dream' in the San Francisco opera house and in the open air Greek theater at Berkeley. She was with the same production in Milwaukee when an urgent wire from Hollywood reached her. On the next train she returned to the film capital to begin work in her first screen role in 'A Midsummer Night's Dream.'"

"Soon Miss de Havilland was playing in one screen success after another—'Anthony Adverse,' 'Captain Blood,' 'Robin Hood,' 'Wings of the Navy' and several more. 'Miss de Havilland is 22, a Californian, and unmarried. She now lives in a modest Hollywood apartment with her mother and sister, Joan Fontaine, who also has begun film career.'"

Howard Career.
Also the following story on Ashley:

"Leslie Howard, one of the few film stars whose brilliant film success is rivaled only by equal success on the stage, yesterday was signed for the important role of Ashley Wilkes in David O. Selznick's production of 'Gone With the Wind,' motion picture version of Margaret Mitchell's best seller novel."

"Howard's selection by Selznick for the role in the Civil War story is a 'people's choice.' In the world-wide balloting for parts in 'Gone With the Wind,' reaching Selznick by letters, postcards and telegrams, Howard as Ashley has been at least as great as that for Gable as Rhett Butler. He is physically a natural for the role, being 5 feet 11 inches tall, and weighing 145 pounds, with light hair and blue eyes."

"Howard has scored notable stage successes in 'The Romantic Age,' 'The Green Hat,' 'Her Cardboard Lover,' 'Escape,' 'Berkeley Square' and 'The Animal Kingdom.' He is credited with co-authorship of 'Berkeley Square.'"

"Only recently Howard produced and starred in 'Hamlet,' touring the nation with it after an auspicious New York run. In pictures Howard scored in 'Outward Bound,' 'A Free Soul,' 'The Animal Kingdom,' 'Berkeley Square,' 'The Scarlet Pimpernel.'"

(Signed) DAVID O. SELZNICK.

SCARLETT O'HARA OFFICIALLY CHOSEN

Mrs. Leigh Holman, wife of a London barrister. She is the mother of a 5-year-old daughter, Suzanne.

Miss Leigh is 5 feet 3 inches tall and weighs 103 pounds. Besides her ancestry, she has many physical characteristics of the novel's heroine—including green eyes and a pointed, determined chin.

Selznick announced Miss Leigh's appearance in the much-discussed lead of the film was made possible by an arrangement with Korda, British producer, whereby he relinquishes a part of his contract to permit Miss Leigh to make one picture a year for Selznick.

Filming of the picture, which will be made in technicolor, is to start within two weeks.

"Miss Leigh has a grand smile," commented Miss Mitchell. "I didn't see 'A Yank at Oxford,' because I was out of town when it played in Atlanta."

As for the much-talked-about question of southern accent, Miss Mitchell opined:

"I imagine Miss Leigh has a lovely voice, and it seems to me that one with an English accent can easily be trained to speak with a genuine southern accent. You know, for years, people in the south considered themselves more English than northern, and spoke more like English people. She should have little trouble with the accent needed."

Miss Mitchell was equally enthusiastic about Howard as Ashley and Miss de Havilland as Melanie.

"Leslie Howard is a marvelous actor," she said, "and I've never seen him turn in a poor performance."

In this connection, Miss Mitchell discovered that of the thousands of letters she has received relative to the casting of the film, Howard seemed to be a universal choice.

"Lots of persons thought that I had something to do with the screening of the picture," she went on, "and of course I had nothing to do with it. But it is interesting that Howard has been chosen for the Ashley part in view of the fact that so many persons wrote to me about Howard being perfect for the part."

Miss Mitchell said that she had seen Miss de Havilland in pictures, notably "Captain Blood," a costume picture.

"She looked simply lovely in the costumes of that film," she said. "She looked like a lady of sweetness, breeding and character. And she wore her costumes so well. I think she will make an excellent Melanie."

Glancing again at a photograph of Miss Leigh, Miss Mitchell said: "She doesn't look over 16. It's hard to believe that she has a five-year-old daughter. But then," she added quickly, "Marlene Dietrich looks young and she has a grown daughter."

Miss Mitchell also set at rest rumors that she "has been in Hol-

BANKERS' MEETING.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP)—The American Bankers' Association announced today its executive council would hold its annual spring meeting April 23-26 at the Homestead, Hot Springs, Va.

accepted, after a brief vacation, a role in "The Happy Hypocrite," a stage play by Clarence Dane, followed by a part in Shakespeare's "Henry VIII," an open air presentation in London's Regent park.

First Major Picture.
"Fire Over England," in which she had a role as a lady-in-waiting, was Vivien's first major picture. She went on to important roles on "Dark Journey," "Storm in a Teacup," "St. Martin's Lane" and "A Yank at Oxford." Meantime on the stage she played "Bats in the Belfry," "Hamlet" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

When Selznick was searching for a Scarlett, Vivien appeared in Hollywood and became a last-minute candidate—she made a lengthy series of tests, directed by George Cukor, director of "Gone With the Wind," and at length triumphed over the field.

Vivien is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 103 pounds, and has Scarlett's green eyes. Her hair, too, is like Scarlett's, black with a definite reddish tint, all of which will be seen in natural color, since the film is to be entirely in technicolor.

In the picture, Vivien is the fiery southern belle whose indomitable will clashes constantly with Rhett Butler, played by Clark Gable. Her first great love, Ashley Wilkes, is played by Leslie Howard, with Olivia de Havilland as the well-beloved Melanie.

In casting Vivien as Scarlett, Selznick has kept his original promise to cast a girl who was not identified in the minds of the public with other roles, and who was a physical counter-part of the original Scarlett. The public voice also has been heeded in the other three selections, who were overwhelmingly "people's choices."

lywood incognito," saying:

"I certainly wouldn't have time to do the housekeeping if I were in Hollywood."

Miss Leigh will share honors in the motion picture with Clark Gable, who was selected some time ago to play the role of Rhett Butler.

The selection of Miss Leigh ended a search of two years, during which hundreds of "unknowns" were given reading tests. Not more than 30 were accepted for actual screen tests, however, due to the high cost of making technicolor tests.

In recent weeks, the number of actresses given color tests was weeded down to three, Miss Leigh, the veteran Jean Arthur, star of many films, and Miss Goddard, who has been seen in pictures as leading lady for Charlie Chaplin, and more recently, in other films.

At Hollywood, it was pointed out that the main reason for rejecting some of the established stars was Selznick's unwillingness to use a well known player unless he could acquire her contract, or at least be guaranteed her services for one picture a year, anyway.

This difficulty was smoothed out in the case of Miss Leigh by the arrangement made with Korda.

Refused To Be Hurried.

Despite jeers and jokes in the movie industry, Selznick refused to be hurried in his choice of a Scarlett. He often stated that it was unimportant how long he waited so long as he found some one he wanted.

The long-delayed motion picture version would have been completed by now, it was said in Hollywood, had it not been for the decision of Norma Shearer to withdraw several months ago from the Scarlett role. The role was handed to Miss Shearer, after months of indecision and search by Selznick.

But Miss Shearer's fans protested, believing the Scarlett role did not suit her. Thus the hunt by scouts was resumed. Among prominent stars mentioned previously was Bette Davis, Academy Award winner.

Miss Mitchell said last night that "folks called her home all day, thinking she knew something."

"Of course, I had nothing to do with the picture. Somehow, folks wouldn't believe it. Mothers would call up my home and beg me to take a look at their daughters." Always, the mothers thought their daughters were perfect Scarlets.

Referring to the telegrams from Selznick, Miss Mitchell pointed to a paragraph in one of them. This read:

"I do hope you are as happy about the final outcome as we are. One of my greatest hopes and dreams is that you will be completely satisfied with the film version of your magnificent work."

"From this distance, I certainly am," she concluded.

BARKER IS SLAIN IN ESCAPE DASH

Four Others Recaptured, One Wounded in Break From Dread Prison Un- der Cover of Heavy Fog.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Arthur (Doc) Barker, 40, one of the four outlaw sons of the late Kate (Ma) Barker, died tonight in Alcatraz Island federal penitentiary of gunshot wounds suffered when he and four other convicts attempted to escape.

Barker was the fourth member of his family to die by violence since the mother and her four sons left their home in the Ozark hills to become bank robbers, kidnappers and killers.

Arthur, serving a life sentence on the federal government's "Devil's Island," in San Francisco bay for the 1934 Karpis-Barker gang kidnapping of Edward Bremer, in St. Paul, Minn., was wounded in the head and chest in the morning's unsuccessful attempt to flee.

Thick Fog.

Guards, their searchlights piercing a fog so thick that only the shadowy forms of the men could be discerned, shot Barker and Dale Stamphill, another kidnaper, and forced the other three to surrender. Stamphill, wounded in both legs and suffering from loss of blood, was in critical condition.

One of the older Barker brothers was killed by authorities before the family gained its infamous notoriety. The youngest, Fred, was killed with his mother when federal agents found their hideout in Florida in 1935. One of the Barker boys is alive, and he is serving a life term in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas.

The other desperadoes who came close to effecting an escape were Henry Young, 28, serving 20 years for robbing the First National Bank of Lind, Wash.; Rufus McCain, 36, serving 90 years for kidnapping bank employees in an attempted robbery at Idabel, Okla., and William Martin, 25, serving 25 years for the armed robbery of a Chicago post office.

Martin, a negro, suffered his injuries and lacerations in sliding down the rocky bank that runs from the main part of the island to the water.

Sawed Way Out.

Obtaining saws from some un-disclosed source, the men sawed their way out of their separate cells, forced the door of a cell, and climbed out a window, dropping 10 feet to the ground.

Then, shielded by the thick fog, they ran across the prison reservation.

A guard, checking the cells at 4 a. m., discovered that they were sounded.

At first Warden James Johnston and his aides were unable to find the missing men. They asked San Francisco police to guard the shore and called on the United States army and the coast guard to aid.

Then the searchlights outlined the figures of two men running down the bank. Guards called on them to surrender and they threw C. A. Watson.

Two others, Barker and Stamphill, refused to halt and guards fired at them.

The fifth man was found near the bottom of the rocky slide. He was bleeding but not seriously hurt. Guards identified him as Martin.

Church and club women throughout Fulton county are co-operating in the nation-wide campaign against infantile paralysis to be stressed during the week of January 23-30 in connection with the celebration of President Roosevelt's birthday.

Working as part of the rural-urban women's state-wide organization, headed by Mrs. Robin Wood and Mrs. Claude Crayton Smith, the county women are forming groups throughout Atlanta, various suburban communities and in rural areas. Their purpose is to promote the sale of buttons during "button week," the proceeds being used for the relief of infantile paralysis victims. Half of the money raised will remain in Georgia.

Friday the 13th Jinx Proves Real-As Many Atlantans Sadly Learn

By WALLACE MINSHULL.

The horoscopes of at least half a dozen Atlantans moved into the sphere of Friday the Thirteenth and left them even more convinced of the pernicious powers of the jinx.

However, at least three others found the day one of good omen and chuckled privately at their good fortune.

The jinx was the day always be to Oscar Sams, 11-year-old resident of Heard's Ferry road.

Oscar left yesterday morning for his regular classes at the Hammond school with the admonition, "Be careful, it's Friday the Thirteenth," ringing in his ears. Cautiously he approached a railroad embankment over which he must cross to reach school. Carefully he peered up and down the railroad tracks, then—a step forward—a black cat, but he can testify to the bottom of the fill. An examination at Grady hospital showed that his left leg had been fractured above the ankle.

"I tried to be careful," quoted Oscar after physicians attended to his injuries, "but I guess the old Thirteenth had the jinx on me."

Little Leonard Jr., 2-year-old son of Leonard Monroe, of Egan Park, may not place much credence in the baneful influence of a black cat, but he can testify to childish emphasis to the contrary of canine members of the animal kingdom. The tot was bitten in the face by a dog while at play, necessitating first aid treatment at Grady.

The jinx proved even more potent in the cases of Fred Daniel, Hay Seay and Claude Anderson, who were arrested by agents of the state alcohol tax unit.

Daniel was "flushed" by Agents Roy Shields, D. R. Longino and Tom Werner shortly before 10 o'clock last night, when he was arrested at Decatur and Bell streets. Up one street, down the other and around several corners the chase held. At Fair and Conley, a negro occupant of the alleged whisky car, possibly hugging a rabbit foot and thanking his stars, jumped from the machine, stumbled and made his getaway.

The car proceeded along Hunter, and near Hill street a second car attempted to "block" the pursuing agents. The police ran it down.

A guard, checking the cells at 4 a. m., discovered that they were sounded.

AAA ANNOUNCES VOTE ON PEACH AGREEMENT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(P)—The Agricultural Adjustment Administration announced today peach growers in Georgia rejected a proposed marketing agreement program in a referendum last month.

The AAA said 343 growers, representing about 82 per cent of the 1938 production of peaches in the area which would have been covered by the program, voted as follows: 192 for and 151 against. The vote fell short of the necessary two-thirds majority.

The marketing program, drafted at conferences of growers with AAA officials, would have made it unlawful to move low-grade peaches in interstate commerce.

NEW COURT SYSTEM WILL START MONDAY

Pretrials for approximately 37 civil cases on the federal court docket will begin Monday morning in United States district court with Judge E. Marvin Underwood presiding.

The session will initiate the new stream-lined court procedure adopted throughout the federal court system last year. It provides for a hearing in which the judge may ask questions, determine what issues are involved and set a time for trial. The practice has long been advocated by bar associations and lawyers, who say it will save the court time and expense.

ODD USE FOR TAX MONEY

According to newspaper reports on the budget of the federal government for the fiscal year which begins next July 1, the sum of $4,500,000 is set aside for the "wage and hour" program. This is not surprising and is, probably, not an over-estimate of cost.

However, there is one item, much smaller in total, yet of vital interest to every American who believes there should remain, in the nation's governmental setup, some slight vestige of states' rights.

The item involved is only $231,440, surely mere pocket change in this day of billions in expenditures. The appropriation sought is for the Bureau of Labor Standards. The explanation of the purpose to which the money is to be devoted, reads "the chief function of which during the coming year will be the drive for state wage and hour laws."

Now there is quite a division of opinion as to the economic workability of such laws as the wage and hour proposal. Many people believe it is advantageous to the workers in industry, that it will result in shorter work weeks and bulkier pay envelopes. Others, equally sincere, believe it will aggravate the economic problems of the nation by reducing the number of jobs available in private industry and that the ultimate result will be smaller wages in the pay envelope for the average worker.

Regardless of opinion on the desirability of the particular law involved, however, the information comes with startling effect that the money paid to the federal government by taxpayers is to be expended in an effort to tell us how we should run our states, how we should legislate and handle our own business.

Wage and hour laws for the various states may be extremely desirable, or the reverse. But it seems rather stretching the functions of the federal government for it to use our own money to compel us, willy nilly, to adopt the theories it would impose upon the separate, and independent, states.

IN MEMORIAM

Now that a proper period of mourning has been permitted, a subject of considerable delicacy is broached. With all due respect to the dear, departed, the victim of his own ambition, he could not stand the pace of modern life and changed conditions.

The people of the United States live in a new atmosphere; society has been growing more complex and one must submit to growing control over natural functions; one-third of the people are ill-housed, ill-fed and ill-clothed; technocracy has invaded the sphere of industry; across the sea, the thunderheads of war gather and the peoples of Europe and Asia quake in fear; trade among nations has stagnated—trade between nations is becoming the fashion; the birth rate is dropping faster than the death rate and, in years to come, society will be dominated by the aged; pensions loom as a burden upon the economy, but the oldsters must be supported in the style to which they have become accustomed; saving—that saving grace—is by the same token going out of fashion; the rebirth of the Republican party has staggered the imagination—and the Republicans, and all through the house is sadness because no longer remains the friend of whom we now speak.

Under these modern conditions it is not surprising that this friend did not long tarry. His influence, while he stayed on this mortal sphere, was great. Life would have been better had he remained. Nothing now is left, however, but his cherished memory. While he lived, his friends did not curse (out loud); they did not drink; they went to bed early; they saved money; they let the maid and the stenographers off on time; they eschewed gambling and in general, lived a Christian life.

His name was Resolution—twin brother of New Year. Remember?

THE ART OF EMBROIDERING FACTS

The "case" between the Tennessee Valley Authority and the public utilities is now before the supreme court of the United States. There is good reason for believing it will remain there, in some of its conflicting ramifications, for some time to come. So Richard Hellman—still restless, though recently arrived at the ripe old age of 25—has undertaken, in the January issue of Harper's magazine, to solve the puzzle in advance for the benefit of a confused people "to whom electricity from water is a mystery."

The youthful, albeit able, writer reveals almost at once an unbiased personal viewpoint, as well as a tendency to treat his opinion as if it were fact. In the early days of the power business, he explains—presumably during the wicked twenties—"electric light and power companies had a free rein to do as they pleased." As the conflict between these private competitors grew in intensity, "a victor emerged who was free to operate at whatever the traffic would bear."

This revelation, if true, will, in all probability, come as a complete surprise to the utilities. They have always contended they were not only rigidly restricted as to rate levels, but were over-supervised at every hand by conflicting regulations of state public service commissions.

The alleged absence of governmental control, however, was accentuated by the young author merely for the purpose of developing his main theme, viz., the desirability of TVA from a "social" angle. "Considering the TVA as a social force," Hellman writes, "one cannot help feeling that other parts of the program, in which the supreme court may not be interested, far outweigh the importance of power. TVA may take its greatest significance as an effort in social adaptation."

To back up this opinion, as well as to bolster the need for such an "adaptation," he carefully points out, as if it were fact, the "condition" of the hill people of the east valley of the Tennessee river. This condition, however, is a relative term and will doubtless continue to remain, as always, merely a matter of opinion.

"The investment in high dams, power lines, etc., by 1943 will come to $500,000,000," Hellman goes on to predict. "The greater part of this money was borrowed by the federal government and received a return of less than 3 per cent." No evidence, as may be presumed, was introduced to show that TVA earned this 3 per cent, or any other per cent, to pay the interest on the borrowed money. It could easily have been mentioned, however, in the interest of a broader and more comprehensive viewpoint, that it came and will, in all probability, continue to come, out of the taxpayer's pocket. The question whether this taxpayer found it agreeable was not touched upon.

But "in an analogous position," Hellman opines—without going to the trouble to substantiate the opinion—"some utilities would have earned, on actual investments, returns of 10, 15, 20 per cent and upwards." The brevity and unqualified character of this remark would lead to the belief the writer felt the less said about actual investments and earnings, particularly as regards TVA, the better.

"In the entire south," he points out, to illustrate the broad field for TVA as an effort in social adaptation, "the largest city had but 260,000 people in 1930." He should have known there were six cities which had over 260,000 people. One, New Orleans, had over 450,000! This is an unimportant error, to be sure. Nevertheless, it is indicative of the writer's tendency to mishandle the facts when at the height of enthusiasm for his pet cause.

Youth, it is conceded, must have its fling. But opinion should not too often be thrown in as fact. Fact should not be tossed too far afield—without qualification. At least, no farther than absolutely necessary to make a point, lest nobody be convinced save only those who want to be, or have already been, won over.

JEWS AND COMMUNISM

(From The Boston Herald.)

It is a cardinal article of the National Socialist creed that Communism is a Jewish invention, and that, specifically, the Red revolution in Russia was the work of Jews. The facts are against this; but perhaps that is unimportant.

At the time of the Leninist coup, Jews formed 3 per cent of the Communist party in Russia. In the original Bolshevik committee of 200 there were only seven Jews, Radek, Zinoviev, Litvinov, Staklov, Larin, Kamenev and Geneski. Of the 17 original commissars, Trotsky was the only Jew. Litvinov is the only Jew in high Soviet office today.

In the last free German election 6,000,000 voted Communist. The number of Jews in the country was about one-tenth of that total. Of 100 Communist deputies elected, not one was a Jew.

Earl Browder and William Z. Foster in this country, and Tim Buck, the Canadian Communist leader, are not Jews. Tim Buck, running for comptroller in the Toronto municipal election, polled his highest votes in the least Jewish wards, and in any case Jews in Canada comprise 1.5 per cent of the population.

Jews do not win political honors in free countries by means of a "Jewish vote." Henry Morgenthau is certainly no subversive influence in the Roosevelt administration, nor does Governor Lehman, of New York, draw his strength from racial connections. It was not his race that made Disraeli the darling of the British imperialist party. Rufus Isaacs (Lord Reading) was not called to the highest judicial office in England because he was a Jew. The independent Liberal party in Great Britain is led by a Jew,

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

OUTWARD, VISIBLE SIGN WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—W. Averell Harriman's appearance at the Hopkins confirmation hearings to pour a liberal bucket of butter over the future secretary of commerce was an outward and visible sign of an inward and invisible fact. Harry Hopkins is the outstanding figure in the powerful group of left-wing presidential lieutenants. Yet his nomination has been heartily approved, and his confirmation energetically lobbied for by administration conservatives and conspicuous big businessmen.

To mention only three of the most important Hopkins supporters, Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC, and Undersecretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes have all used what influence they could muster to make Hopkins' confirmation easy. Nor is their influence to be underrated. To mention only three of the most important Hopkins supporters, Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC, and Undersecretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes have all used what influence they could muster to make Hopkins' confirmation easy. Nor is their influence to be underrated.

Democratic senators who might have opposed Hopkins. They regard him as an elder statesman of their party, and many of them are grateful to him for past support. The voice of Jesse Jones has equal authority among the same senators who esteem Baruch. And John Hanes' family is one of the most politically potent tribes in North Carolina. Personal enmity existed between Hopkins and the Carolina senator, who was chairman of the committee sitting on Hopkins' confirmation. It's only human to suspect that Senator Bailey's comparative moderation in examining Hopkins may perhaps be traced in part to a good word from Hanes.

WHO HEARS BUSINESS? Of course, one reason why such men should be cheering in Hopkins' corner is that they like him very much. He is an intimate friend of Baruch, Jesse Jones and he is an ancient adversary of the bridge table, and Jones is extremely fond of him. Indeed, in the early years of the New Deal, Jones offered Hopkins one of the most important of the business positions in the gift of the RFC.

But there's another reason why Harriman, Baruch, Jones, Hanes, S. Clay Williams, General Robert R. Wood, of Sears-Roebuck, and many more of the same sort, welcome the Hopkins appointment. Hitherto, there has been no one really close to the President to whom businessmen could take their woes. Perhaps more important still, there has been no really satisfactory contact between businessmen and the New Deal group to which Hopkins belongs, and which, so often, is predominant in policy-making.

The nearest thing to such a contact was established some time ago by Prentiss L. Cooney, an agreeable broker sent down to Washington under the auspices of Harriman and the Business Advisory Council. At Cooney's little dinners, business leaders like Edward R. Stettinius Jr., have met New Dealers like Thurman Arnold and Thomas C. Corcoran. Aside from the Cooney dinners, businessmen could only talk to administration conservatives, who agreed with them anyway. And, most of the time, they had to make a confidant of Hopkins' predecessor at Commerce, Uncle Dan Roper, which was just about like whispering their troubles to the empty air.

TASK FOR A ZEALOT Some of Hopkins' friends have inclined to try to paint him as a conservative at heart. This, of course, he is not. Like the other members of his group, he is strictly a member of "the President's team," to borrow his own words. When the President was at his most aggressive, Hopkins was even more so. Now that the President has decided on a period, so far as social and economic legislation is concerned, of pause and digestion, Hopkins is all for pausing and consolidating gains. His tone before the committee was far less bellicose than in the old days.

The experiment of Hopkins' commerce secretaryship, which he himself has already initiated in a long series of conferences with important businessmen, is bound to be a fascinating one. He is accessible, easy to talk to, shrewd and ready of understanding. When businessmen go to him, they are bound to be affected in some degree by what he says. Meanwhile, he also is bound to be affected by what the businessmen have to tell him.

If all goes well, there ought to be a natural drawing together of the two parties to the Hopkins-tycoon conversations. At any rate, as a Hopkins backer said, "A businessman will now be able to get a yes or no answer on his problems."

Harry Hopkins is a zealot, if ever there was one. As secretary of commerce, the President has given him primary responsibility for getting the economic machinery going. He will bring just as much zeal to his new task as he did to dispensing relief. The result will be seen in the days to come.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

"How doth the busy little bee
Improve each shining hour—
But he doesn't have to fuss, like me,
When each idea goes sour.

He doesn't have to fret and fume,
And groan and scowl and pout,
When clocks the minutes fast consume.

With nought to write about.

"Established 18—"

How many times have you seen,
Following the name of some well-known business establishment, the words, "Established in 18—"

Some date of fifty or more years ago.

That simple line is an accolade of honor for many such commercial institutions. It carries the weight of precedent and says, by implication, "If we have served so that you, the public, have given us profits so that we might continue, through all these years, it must be good service and worthy goods we offer."

But there is another, personal, reflection that always comes with the sight of such a line. That is the reflection as to your own, individual, location of residence, status in life and in the world, the time this business was first begun.

There is, for instance, one well-known establishment on Edgewood avenue which carries, on the brass nameplate at its door, the words, "Established in 1885." I never pass that sign and see the words without thinking, "that business was born the same year as I."

Just After The War.

I can see from my office window another line beneath another firm name. This one reads, "Established in 1866." And the thoughts that come to my mind are—

Can you picture Atlanta in 1866, just after the close of the War Between the States? The dreadful scars of the siege of the city, of federal occupation, are still visible on all sides. The city is still under military rule. Its menfolk, who went away in the armies of the gray, have returned to their ruined homes, many of them.

Brave souls, however, are beginning the rebuilding of greater city upon the ruins of the old. Wooden buildings are going up, as fast as contractors and carpenters can get to them. There is a new bustle and activity about the streets. Men are thriving and investing in the ways of peace, once more, after four years of studying the ways of war.

And a couple of young fellows open a retail store, to furnish the supplies needed by their fellow citizens.

They didn't know what the future would bring, those young fellows. All they could do was meet each day's problems that day, even as you and I. And they couldn't dream that, in the distant years, the ways of peace, once more, after four years of studying the ways of war.

wars and the troubles and the changes in men's minds and opinions, the new outlook on life which would come through those years.

Yet one thing they could do, and did, they say, that every customer of their store got good value, was treated fairly, honestly and decently. That the goods they sold were honest value for the price charged.

They must have done this. Otherwise the store they opened, that ancient day could never have survived through all these years. For customers don't go back a second time, don't continue to patronize a store which does not give good value.

The ability to name a date so long gone and to point to a business still successful, is highest possible honor in the world of business.

Atlanta is fortunate in possessing so many fine establishments which can say—

"Established in 18—"

It is a guarantee of integrity, of new progress through the years of the future.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Wednesday, January 14, 1914.

"The most spectacular and disastrous conflagration since the Terminal district fire raged for hours, occurred last night and early this morning when the modern plant of the Cotton States and Southern Supply Company was completely destroyed, and the warehouse of the B. F. Avery & Sons firm was damaged, together with a number of smaller buildings at Whitehall street and Stewart avenue."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Monday, January 14, 1869:

"Hon. Hamp McWhorter, who is known from one end of the state to the other, is here attending supreme court. Barring a swollen leg resulting from an 'aching' 'Hamp' is just as handsome as ever."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Radical NEW YORK, Jan. 13. I have given deep study to many books, papers and speeches by leading economists of the New Deal on the gradual refutation of quantitative reserves to combine deficit financing and collective bargaining with the liquidation of human rights. The corollary seems to be the social conscription of agriculture.

Mr. Eccles, Mr. Thurman Arnold, Mr. Leon Henderson and, at times, Father Coughlin and Dr. Townsend have seemed to me to be in agreement on this radical proposal.

If I interpret them aright—and I sometimes doubt that I fully understand them in some particulars—this position marks a dangerous departure from the traditional capitalist concept of social and industrial transition. Property rights inevitably abdicate to political commitments of imprudent force which everywhere conflict with tax relief and liberty of conscience.

Mr. Eccles, be it said, appears to favor the middle way, while Mr. Arnold's position seems to me to place him a little to the left of totalitarian wage-levelism in the subnormal areas of intellectual orientation. That is my understanding.

In Partial Agreement So much for that, and I may say that in partial agreement to the point where this theory defies the fundamental standpoint of economic liberty in the intermittent cycles of politico-economic finance. I have to dissent there, holding that the experience of the last half-century provides ample proof and warning that a simplified control of constitutional alignments is no guarantee of non-productive bimetallism. There is no proved formula in all economic knowledge for the absolute implementation of compulsory expansion and social conscription.

The contrary, I insist, is just cockeyed. It simply doesn't make sense, and no cockeyed jansanary can make it make sense.

Schultz of Vienna wrote, more than 200 years ago: "By creating wealth the state revives the indispensable factor of fiduciary exchange which is co-existent with the judicial acceptance of private enterprise at an annual living wage."

That is as true today as it was then.

Elementary Absolute Every attempt to violate this elementary absolute of simple economics has produced a profound deterioration in the federal reserve, where there is always a wise tendency to neglect industrial feudalism if accompanied by democratic guarantees and a fair volume of electoral resources. None but a visionary theorist will argue against the demonstrated realities of a field of abstract socialism conditioned by the fiduciary habits of human dignity.

Atheism, therefore, need be vitiated only by the simple pressure of international usury, as shown by the bloody ignominies of court economic adventures in Robespierre in the middle ages down to Giuseppe Avanti, whose economic heresies wrecked the Milanese nobility in the famine of 1790. Whenever any considerable number of the people are caught between greedy dualism and the remorseless limitations of supply and demand you must have social and economic Chauvinism, with all the terrors that that dried phrase implies. The master-and-slave equation in commodity consumption cannot be revoked by esoteric appeal to corporate enhancement or resort to artificial repudiation. One need only refer to the disastrous exploit of Bjornstrom, the economic edema who plunged Sweden into a maelstrom of amorphous barter in the futile repercussions of the 27 years' war, for a complete answer to that which I understand to be Father Coughlin's remedy for existing inequalities.

As to Mr. Henderson's contention, if I comprehend his warning, it need only be remarked that the underlying view is not essential to an accurate conviction in advance of imperative reform. To ascribe any complete hypothesis of currency values in this apparent paradox, to gamble commodities against the future and, I think, fallacious parallel of sound money, is a vicious acceptance of the master-and-slave equation and the forerunner of a proletarian oligarchy.

The fatal delusion of raucous altruism controls the vexed problem of religious principle, while so-called experts argue and future events mock the struggle for an equitable flow of purchasing debentures.

That way lies chaos.

Old Phone Books.

Searching through Chicago's half million cast-off telephone books for Uncle Charlie's will or somebody's rent money has become a regular business at 40 cents an hour.

The Chicago phone directory, with its 1404 large, limp pages, proves a popular hiding place for subscribers' money, insurance policies, photographs and love letters.

Many subscribers remember these things in time to rescue them when old books are traded for the new but at every exchange period hundreds of persons try to retrieve their belongings after books are stacked by the thousands in storehouses.

Professional searchers can be hired at 40 cents an hour or the subscriber can do his own hunting. Whole families have spent days looking for the particular book containing their reserve capital. They usually find what they are looking for unless someone else beats them to it.

New Gift Idea.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

VACATION TIME This period, when football has modestly withdrawn to comparative and seasonal obscurity, is vacation time for the hardest working press agents in the world—the college football public relations men.

They toil in relative obscurity. The waste baskets and sports copy desk men know them well. Now and then they achieve by-lines. More often their stuff is employed as fillers or used as short notices from the college towns from which they file.

There are very few good ones. I know, in an experience not exactly limited, two good ones. The press agent in a small college town does not need to be so versatile. About all he needs to do is to see that the press box passes are arranged for; that the wives of faculty men and newspapermen are kept out of the press box; and that hot coffee is passed at the intermission.

The boys who have to be good are those who toil for colleges in the cities. They have to know all the answers. They have to get up the press box tickets, arrange for the coffee, and then get down to the job of meeting the visiting writers and making them love the old place, its team, and its coach.

It is no easy job and requires an ability which need not be unappreciated. They must meet all sorts of football reporters; drinking reporters, religious reporters, reporters who want to shop; reporters who want to visit the place of historical interest; reporters who want a date with a young blonde; and the address of the best night club or night spot; reporters who want to find good food. And so forth and so on.

MR. TED MANN Mr. Ted Mann, who for years has publicized the now Very Blue Poor Devils at Duke University, is one of the best. He has served his time in purgatory trying to handle the ticket requests before the Rose Bowl game. He did a fine job at that, and probably hurt not a single seeker after 50-yard-line seats.

Mr. Mann has done his bit at getting his men on the all-Southern and all-American teams. That is one of the jobs I forgot to mention. It is not one of the lesser tasks but one of the more important. The press agent who has a good vicious guard or a fine running halfback gets down to work by the time the second game is played. The sports editors of the nation begin to receive pieces saying that Joe Blow, the guard up at Dear Old State, is the greatest to appear in a couple of decades. Then come the stories about his fine character and the fact that he wants to become a missionary, or to play in a swing band. He must have an ambition. Then come more reports. Various people find themselves quoted about Joe Blow. A scout for a reporter, answering a query and saying, "Yeah, I thought Joe was real good today," will find himself quoted the next week in a dozen papers saying that Joe Blow on last Saturday was the best guard he ever saw.

Mr. Mann is one of the best. He has his little black book and in it are the names of young ladies who do not mind going to a dance or a dinner with a football reporter. He also knows where the best restaurants are and, in case of a visit to Durham, can arrange a room to marry girls who also can take it. Some of their wives can even shake hands with the visiting firemen and not wince.

In addition to all these duties they must turn out good, readable copy. It's quite a profession and I know of no better ones than the Messrs. Mann and Renegar. Mr. Renegar, because his field is New Orleans instead of Durham, wins the medal with palms. They both are good.

Oh, yes, Mr. Al Smith, at L. S. U., is on the way. He, too, is getting good.

MR. H. RENEGAR Mr. Horace Renegar, however, probably deserves the medal with palms. He is in New

SABOTAGE CHARGE HURLED BY HULL AT TARIFF LOBBIES

'Do Not Intend To Sit Silent,' State Secretary Tells Senators; Probe of Activities Planned.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(AP)—Secretary Hull emerged from a critical barrage of senate committee questioning on his trade program with an unofficial commission to draft legislation for an investigation of "tariff lobbyists" he said were intent on wrecking it.

The white-haired secretary, of state was called before the senate finance committee for questioning about his department's policy in making reciprocal trade treaties.

Senators from sugar-producing states wanted to ask him particularly about reports that the United States, without waiting for public hearings on a proposed revision of the trade treaty with Cuba, had already promised Cuba that the American duty on sugar would be cut from 90 to 75 cents a hundredweight.

Hull flatly denied the reports, and from a defense of the department's trade policies swung quickly to the attack by volunteering that "this town now is swarming with sugar lobbyists."

"I think it is only due to the American people, when our foreign trade is falling off, to know that the city is swarming with lobbyists who are hanging on our flanks to attack the trade agreements program," he added.

His remarks brought immediate protests from Senator Adams, Democrat, Colorado, and O'Mahoney, Democrat, Wyoming, that the only sugar "lobbyists" they had seen were bona fide sugar beet raisers or processors who came here at the invitation of the State Department.

(The department invited testimony from interested persons on its proposal to revise the Cuban treaty.)

Adams declared, "I don't think these people should be pilloried as lobbyists or the inference left that they are being paid to use their influence."

Hull replied that he alluded only to professional lobbyists who were attempting to undermine and discredit the whole trade agreements program.

"And," he added vigorously, "I don't intend to sit silent in the midst of all this activity."

Art of Defensive Bidding Stressed By Sharpsteen at Bridge School

Rain Fails To Keep Atlantans From Constitution Classes As Director Introduces New One-Round Forcing Jump Takeout for First Time.

Yesterday's rain failed to dampen the enthusiasm at The Constitution Bridge School as large crowds turned out for the morning, afternoon and night classes to hear Harold Sharpsteen, the Constitution's Culbertson expert, explain the art of defensive bidding with holdings of limited high-card strength.

When to take aggressive action defensively with long suits and weak honor-trick holdings and when to pass with strong hands, proved one of the fascinating features of the lesson. How defensive bidding values his hand in playing tricks was also included in the day's instruction.

A new one-round forcing jump takeout for partner of a defending overall bidder was introduced for the first time in Atlanta yesterday by Sharpsteen. Following an adverse opening suit bid which is overcalled defensively, partner of first defending bidder, it was explained, may jump in a new suit to show a minimum of three honor-tricks.

R. VIN CATES DIES; VETERAN GUARD

Brother of Fulton Lieutenant Cal Cates.

R. Vin Cates, veteran prison camp guard and a brother of Lieutenant Cal Cates, of Fulton county police, died last night at the residence on Northside drive.

Cates, who was 66, was stricken ill about two weeks ago. He served more than 35 years as a prison camp guard, and for the past 25 years was employed at the Bellwood camp. He was a native of Fulton county.

Besides his brother, he is survived by three sisters, Mrs. W. M. Higgins, Mrs. E. I. Cross and Mrs. Louis Bankston, and three other brothers, E. S. Cates, Charlie Cates and Clark Cates. Funeral plans will be announced by Harry G. Poole.

TWO DIE IN CRASH SOUTH OF DALTON

Truck-Auto Collision Also Seriously Injures Third Occupant of Car.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. DALTON, Ga., Jan. 13.—John R. (Red) Middleton, 44-year-old Murray county deputy sheriff, and Hubert H. Walters, 27, of Detroit, Mich., a native of Dalton, were killed late last night when Walters' automobile was struck by a truck on the Dixie highway five miles south of here.

Blair Adams, of Chatsworth, third occupant of the automobile, was brought to a Dalton hospital with injuries said to include a broken pelvis, and injuries about the chest and head.

F. D. Wheat, 21, driver of the southbound truck, escaped injury, though automobile and truck both were demolished.

Middleton, a resident of Chatsworth, was a son-in-law of Sheriff Mike Wilbanks, of Murray county. He was a World War veteran and a member of the Dalton American Legion post. Surviving him are his wife; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Wilbanks, of Ramhurst; four brothers and four sisters.

Rites for Middleton will be held at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon at Mount Zion Methodist church, near Chatsworth. The Rev. J. B. Godfrey and the Rev. W. M. Kelly will officiate.

Walters, who arrived here two days ago for a visit, is survived by his wife and a baby. Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Sunday morning in Antioch church.

GET COMFORTING RELIEF FROM Runny HEAD COLD

DO THIS: Put some Vicks VapoRub up each nostril and sniff well back. You'll feel better right away. Next, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water; then breathe in the steam. The medicated vapors clear the air passages. At bedtime, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back so that its long-continued double action can relieve the misery of the cold while you sleep. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice; at the same time its medicated vapors, breathed in direct, bring comfort to the irritated air-passages. Try it.

EAST IS WHITENED BY RECORD SNOWS

Traffic in New York and Other Cities Stalled for Hours.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP)—A heavy snowstorm, unusually severe in New York city, swept the eastern seaboard tonight and reached western cities after scattered spells of springlike weather.

At midnight eight inches of snow blanketed the battery in lower Manhattan, surpassing the record seven inches of last Thanksgiving Day.

The weather bureau predicted a 10-inch fall by morning.

Connecticut reported a general snowfall of three inches with a six-inch blanket in some sections of the state—and no sign of letup. Rhode Island mustered its snow-fighting equipment to battle one of the heaviest snowfalls of the winter.

Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee and Salt Lake City, among others, reported snow, while Washington, D. C., drew sleet.

Sleet and rain covered parts of the Carolinas, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

In New York city, the department of sanitation mustered 32,073 men, including emergency laborers, to pitch in early tomorrow.

Police said the continual snow fall, which started at 2:15 p. m., had caused the worst traffic tie-up in years. By 8 p. m., a night force of 3,600 was busy fighting

GET COMFORTING RELIEF FROM Runny HEAD COLD

DO THIS: Put some Vicks VapoRub up each nostril and sniff well back. You'll feel better right away. Next, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water; then breathe in the steam. The medicated vapors clear the air passages. At bedtime, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back so that its long-continued double action can relieve the misery of the cold while you sleep. VapoRub acts direct through the skin like a poultice; at the same time its medicated vapors, breathed in direct, bring comfort to the irritated air-passages. Try it.

Colonel Ruppert, Living Exemplification of a Winner, Dies at 71

The man who built the greatest machine the game of baseball ever has known—to play in the stadium created by the game's most glamorous star—has passed on to that better land.

There may be some who will say that, in creating such a wrecking crew as the New York Yankees, Colonel Jacob Ruppert did the game a little harm. It may be looked upon as a baseball Frankenstein.

But this is hardly true. While the Yankees have been ruthless and overpowered all opposition, they nevertheless have lined the American league parks with gold. Everybody wanted to see the Yankees play, and so attendance figures were boosted in towns that ordinarily would show little profit on their own merits.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert was baseball's No. 1 owner. It was he who visualized the gold in Babe Ruth's home-run bat and unhesitatingly awarded the Babe baseball's largest player contract.

Colonel Ruppert, in giving Ruth $80,000 per year, established a precedent baseball may never know again. For you must agree it really is something for a baseball player to make more than the President of the United States, regardless of how you may feel about the President.

Baseball men generally will feel a tinge of sadness at the passing of Colonel Ruppert.

There is an apt parallel in the game of football. When the plane in which Knute Rockne was traveling crashed in a Kansas wheat field on an Indian summer afternoon in 1931, the game of football was robbed of its greatest figure.

It has been a long time, now, since Knute Rockne lost his life, but the man to replace him has never yet come along. 'Tis said that no man, in this vale of bunkers and tears, is irreplaceable, but the second Rockne, as said, has not appeared.

Many of the old heroes are gone from baseball now—Colonel Ruppert, Colonel T. L. Huston, Uncle Will Robinson. The inexorable march of time is no respecter of persons.

And only time will tell what effect the death of Colonel Ruppert will have on the Yankees, in particular, and baseball in general.

YOU CAN'T BUY IT.

It may be that some will say the Yankees should have the greatest organization in baseball because of Colonel Ruppert's vast holdings, his money.

And yet pennant-winning baseball teams cannot be bought. I will offer the case of Tom Yawkey, the millionaire, or billionaire, owner of the Boston Red Sox. Yawkey had aspirations to buy a club that could beat the Yankees. He poured literally millions into the Red Sox organization. And all with the same result.

The stars of the gold-plated Red Sox were no match for the Ruppert Rifles.

Yawkey does not have the baseball background that naturally was Colonel Ruppert's heritage. He surrounded himself with an organization that takes first place without a struggle.

He didn't do it with money, but with a keenness and foresight that other baseball owners seemingly did not have.

It is highly possible that baseball will not feel the loss of Colonel Ruppert as keenly as football did the death of Knute Rockne.

Knute Rockne left no great organization. Colonel Ruppert has. The Yankee organization, embracing several of the better minds in the game, is in a position to carry on if the policies of Colonel Ruppert are maintained by the new owner, who happens to be his brother.

At any rate, baseball generally deeply regrets the loss of such a figure. During his lifetime there was a glamor and cast to the Yankees which no other team has ever attained.

First there was Ruth, and then the house that Ruth built—Yankee stadium. Ruth put the old sock appeal in baseball. Followed the wrecking crew that deserved, as no previous gang of players ever did, the appellation of "world's champion."

And this all came about because of Colonel Ruppert, whose money was a means to an end but whose brain, after all, visualized the vital importance of organization and the need for recognizing values.

Long after the name of Colonel Ruppert remains only a fond memory to baseball fans, it vividly will be recalled that he once paid a slugger named Ruth a salary larger than the President of the United States.

HE LIKED TO WIN.

Colonel Ruppert had an insatiable desire to win. And he was strictly honest about it. He complained when the Yankees lost a game. He wanted to win them all. Not even a 10-game lead seemed to satisfy him.

Because of his desire to win and belief that winning was the best thing for the game, he consistently refused to break up the Yankees. Instead, he ordered associates to strengthen the club wherever possible.

Even had the steady winning of the Yankees paled on the public fancy, there is every reason to believe Colonel Ruppert would have gone on strengthening the club.

He was unquestionably that honest about wanting to win. He would have no part in victimizing the fans.

The Colonel was criticized roundly for not making a place for Babe Ruth after the latter's days of player usefulness were ended.

He may have been wrong in this respect, but the fact remains that he looked out for Ruth to the extent of establishing a trust fund for him. Not many owners would have gone to this trouble.

ANYTHING CAN HAPPEN.

If, as one reads, a year's experience as a manager is going to help Paul Richards this summer, heaven help the Southern league. As a first-year pilot, Richards steered the Crackers to every championship in sight—All-Star game, pennant and Dixie series. As one wag has remarked, a year's experience probably will enable Richards to more ably look out for his new heir.

HARRY JOHNSTON IN GREAT SHAPE

Star Rookie Counted on as Starter; Crackers Sign Lockbaum.

Harry Johnston, star rookie of the Crackers last season until forced out with a spiked foot, was in town yesterday for a physical examination.

Physicians who examined the ex-Auburn star pronounced him in great shape.

All of which is pleasing news to the Atlanta club because Johnston is counted on as one of the Crackers' starting hurlers this year.

Manager Paul Richards has all the confidence in the world in the youngster who pitched a one-hitter last year. The Cracker pilot says he is one of the best prospects he has ever seen, and is counted on to take his regular turn on the mound this year.

Johnston said his foot has not given him any trouble since healing, and in addition he has gained some 15 pounds during the winter. Last year he weighed about 170, but now tips the beams at 185, and expects to stay at this figure during the summer.

He was signed by the Crackers during the regular season, but was forced out of the lineup before the play-off and Dixie series by the injury.

Other news from Earl Mann also had to do with a college star, now under the Cracker wing. Mann announced the signing of 21-year-old Emil Lockbaum, ex-L. S. U. star pitcher. The youthful right-hander was recommended to Atlanta by C. F. Dietrich, Cracker scout.

Mann was enthusiastic about the young man.

"He is a great prospect," the Cracker president said. "He has just been graduated, and although it's a big step into the Southern league, I think he will do us some good."

Lockbaum is 5 feet, 11 inches tall and weighs 165 pounds.

UNIQUE BOWLING MATCH TONIGHT

One of the most unique individual bowling contests ever attempted in the south will be staged on the downtown Atlanta and Miami alleys this evening as the two women who tied for top honors in the John Blick invitational tournament roll five games on their local drives and have the scores telegraphed to one another to determine the winner of the title and trophy.

Sarah Garner, high-scoring local woman bowler, will start rolling five games on the downtown drives at 7:30 o'clock. I. Watkins, of Miami, will begin her five games at the same hour and they will roll simultaneously, with their scores being fired to each alley at the completion of the five-game series. The player having the highest five-game total for the series will be declared the John Blick invitational tournament champion.

Both players collected 567 for their five games this season's event, surpassing the defending champion, Lib Bradshaw, of Charlotte, by a single pin. It is highly probable that big scores will be turned in by the championship play-off this evening as both players are primed for their best scores.

Ruppert, Ruth Friends Again as Death Came

Fading Colonel Somehow Found Strength To Grasp Hand of Once Great Slugger.

By HARRY FERGUSON.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Colonel Jacob Ruppert died today but in the last, dark hours before he set out on the great adventure he somehow found the strength to stretch out a white hand and make friends again with Babe Ruth.

The road that these two traveled together for so long—one the owner of the New York Yankees and the other the team's greatest player—forked into two lonesome trails on the day in 1934 when Ruth left the Yankees, a bitter and dissatisfied man. Since then they have been apart.

Death has been on the doorstep of Ruppert's apartment for a week. Suffering from a complication of diseases, the baseball magnate has been growing weaker. Last night he was in an oxygen tent when the telephone jangled and Al Brennan, his secretary, answered it.

"Hello, Al," said a booming voice. "This is Babe Ruth. I want to see the colonel."

"Come right on up, Babe," Brennan said.

Then Brennan tiptoed to Ruppert's bedside and whispered: "Babe Ruth is coming up to see you."

Ruppert took a long time to give his answer and when he did it was only one weak word: "Fine."

So Ruth came up, fumbling awkwardly with his hat, his big moon face more serious than it had ever been before.

Ruppert had dozed off and it was a half-hour before he spoke again.

"I want to see the Babe," he said.

"He's right here beside the bed," said a nurse.

A weak smile lifted the corners of Ruppert's mouth and one hand went shakily out toward the Babe. Both of Ruth's big brown hands—hands that had given Ruppert endless hours of joy when they gripped a bat and arched home runs into the stands—were thrust out toward the bed.

They gripped hands for a moment and nobody spoke. Ruppert was too weak to talk; Ruth's throat was too full of whatever it is that sorrow puts there. Then the Babe swallowed hard and said huskily: "Colonel, you're going to snap out it. You and I are going to see the opening game of the season together."

He was lying and both of them knew it, but once again a faint smile came across the colonel's lips and he dropped into sleep again. Ruth tiptoed to the door, brushing at his eyes, and as he passed Brennan he said: "That's the first time the colonel ever called me Babe; he always called me Ruth before."

Tonight there was issued a list of honorary pallbearers and down in the list is this brief notation—"Babe Ruth, to represent former Yankees."

FARR IS BEATEN BY RED BURMAN

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(UP)—Clarence "Red" Burman, of Baltimore, Jack Dempsey's protégé, won an unpopular 10-round decision over Tommy Farr, of Wales, tonight, tagging the rugged Welshman with his fifth defeat on American soil.

Farr lost the Friday the 13th decision, but in doing so he won more popularity than he had in losing to Joe Louis, Maxie Baer, Jim Braddock and Lou Nova. The 10,000 fans in the Garden booed the decision for more than five minutes. They gave the loser a tremendous ovation as he stepped down from the ring.

Ruppert Was Grandest Man in Baseball—Ruth.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(P)—"All I can say is, we lost the best man baseball ever had," said Babe Ruth when informed of the Yankee owner's death.

"He brought baseball to the top. Picked it up when it was a sort of hit and miss thing and made it a big business. He boosted salaries, built the greatest park in the business (Yankee Stadium) and was always a fine fellow to talk with and bargain with. I had my troubles when I was a young fellow on the Yanks. The Colonel always treated me with the greatest consideration. He was a great man."

The Babe continued: "He helped young players more than anyone I know. Built up a farm system and gave jobs for more players. He never took a backward step the whole time. He was owner of the Yanks. We'll never see another owner like him."

RUPPERT LEAVES A VAST FORTUNE

Babe Ruth Leaves Bedside of His Former Employer in Tears.

By SCOTT HERSHEY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(P)—Colonel Jacob Ruppert, the man who hated to lose and who loved to win and who mixed baseball, buildings and beer to his eternal delight and profit, died today after a long illness.

Owner of the New York Yankees, one of baseball's really great teams; owner of a big brewery and a leader in the industry, owner of vast, rich real estate—one of the largest property holders in New York—the multimillionaire colonel at 71 was a living exemplification of a winner—and all the world loves a winner.

"You and I are going to see the opening game of the season," said Babe Ruth as he stood beside the colonel's bedside last night. Babe knew the colonel wouldn't be there. Perhaps the colonel knew, too, for he reached out, squeezed Ruth's hand and said faintly: "Babe."

The big fellow left the colonel's room in tears. The colonel, in all their years of association, had never called him "Babe" before; it was always Ruth.

Colonel Ruppert's vigorous life was curtailed last April when he was stricken with an attack of plebitis (inflammation of the veins), a painful affliction which he endured with his customary cheerfulness and good nature.

It nearly broke his old sporting heart, though, when he was told that he had been stricken with his third consecutive World Series loss. He had to take his baseball second-hand via radio.

The colonel's condition became grave early this week and the last rites of the Roman Catholic church were administered. But he smilingly forecast his speedy recovery.

For two hours last night he was in an oxygen tent. He managed a weak "good morning" today to Albert Brennan, his confidential and executive secretary for the past 27 years. The doctor came at 10 and told Brennan to notify the colonel's family that the end was near. At 10:28 he died peacefully, those at his bedside said, with no hint of the pain he had endured these last months.

A high requiem mass will be celebrated at 11 a. m. Monday in St. Ignatius Loyola church on upper Park avenue. Interment will be private in the Ruppert family vault at Kenisco cemetery.

The Ruppert fortune has been estimated at between $70,000,000 and $100,000,000. Colonel Ruppert was a bachelor and gave himself the proud title of "the best housekeeper in New York."

Leaves To Miss Ruppert, Says Prexy Harridge.

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—(P)—Informed of the death of Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankee baseball team, William Harridge, president of the American league, said today "the passing of Colonel Ruppert is a shock to me as I know it will be to all members of the American league."

"A genuine sportsman imbued with an intense desire for victory, Colonel Ruppert from his entrance into the game surrounded himself with men of experience and keen baseball judgment. As a result, he built quietly and without ostentation one of the greatest and most efficient organizations in the history of baseball."

"Despite his many victories, Colonel Ruppert was ever mindful of the progress and lasting good of the American league."

"Colonel Ruppert's keen judgment and wise counsel will be greatly missed at future gatherings of the American league."

Ruppert Never Pleased With Narrow Victories

Colonel Demanded That Yanks and All His Farm Clubs Crush Their Foes.

By WHITNEY MARTIN.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(P)—In that veiled future with its promise of content may Colonel Jacob Ruppert slake his thirst for perfection, a thirst that, particularly where his Yankees were concerned, was the only intertemperance in a life otherwise a model of moderation.

For victory for the Yankees was not enough. It had to be smothering, crushing, annihilating victory. A 10-run lead in a game was a razor margin. A 10-game lead in the league race was precarious. A World Series which went more than four games was a calamity.

He had money, but when it came to making more at the expense of overwhelming victory, he was not interested. A four-game World Series meant no money in his pocket, yet such a series was his fondest desire. A 10-game lead in the race might shrink the gate, but 10 games was not enough.

He spent money lavishly, and after a year or two of experimentation, shrewdly built the Yankees into the most consistently great team in history.

When he and Colonel Tillinghast Huston entered the baseball arena in 1915 by purchasing the Yankees, they were babes in the wood. They were fair prey to club owners who saw a chance to get big money for big flops.

But the years brought baseball wisdom, and when the Yankees paid about $105,000 to Harry Frazee, of the Red Sox, for a left-handed pitcher who doubled as a home run hitter, it marked the beginning of the Yankees' golden era. The pitcher's name was Babe Ruth.

The Yankees crashed through to their first pennant for the colonel in 1921, but the World Series was disastrous. It went eight games, with the New York Giants winning.

Since then the Yankees have been the team to beat year after year. In the last 18 seasons they won the pennant 10 times, were second six times, third once, and only once worse than third.

And four times they fulfilled Ruppert's dream of a perfect World Series. In 1927, against the Pittsburgh Pirates, Waite Hoyt, George Pipgras, Herb Pennock and Wilky Moore hurled without defeat. In 1928, against the St. Louis Cardinals, Hoyt, Pipgras and Tom Zachary won four in a row, with Hoyt doing double duty.

In 1932, against the Chicago Cubs, Red Ruffing, Lefty Gomez, Pipgras and Moore again provided a clean slate, and last year the Cubs again were the victims in a four-game series.

So Ruppert's last team, and possibly his greatest, fulfilled partially his dream of perfection, although the victory margins were not great enough, the bats too often muffled.

And perhaps his dream of the misty future included Lefty Gomez and Red Ruffing pitching no-hit double-headers, the Yankee batsmen stepping up to hit each pitched ball into the center field bleachers, and each World Series going just four games.

For with the good colonel, it wasn't the money. It was the principle of the thing. In his eyes there was no substitute for perfection.

SEMINARY BEATS COOPER HALL

Washington Seminary's high-scoring basketball team trounced a scrappy Cooper Hall sextet from Rome last night, 44 to 11, on the seminary court.

Cato Wheelchel, sharp-shooting forward, led the scoring for the night, sinking 14 points. Jo Anne Dorman and Hudson each added eight to the winners' total.

Captain Caroline Yundt starred at guard for Seminary. Gibbons led the futile Cooper Hall attack, gathering 4 of her team's 11 points.

GILLIAM PROTESTS EXCLUSION FROM MERGER CAMPAIGN

Writes Survey Committee Council Members Are Anxious To Participate in Deliberations.

While members of the Citizens' One-Government League, headed by W. Eugene Harrington, yesterday were preparing to take their fight for a consolidated Atlanta and Fulton county government to the floor of the Georgia legislature, Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, chairman of a special council committee named to study the Reed report, protested that his group had been ignored.

The citizens' group Thursday made the recommendation and announced it would fight for approval of a proposal to set up a commission of 15 to draft a charter for submission to voters.

Gilliam addressed his protest to James P. Allen, chairman of the Citizens' Survey Committee, which initiated the report made by Dr. Thomas H. Reed on whose findings the action by the citizens' committee is predicated.

He pointed out that his committee withheld action pending preparation of recommendations by Allen's group and said that members of the special committee and a great majority of city council "are anxious to participate in any movement looking toward an improvement in local governments."

"Since we have waited a month and a half for the reception of your report, and since it now appears that your group is in process of giving practical expression to what I presume to be your findings, I should greatly appreciate the benefit of a report from your group setting out such recommendations as have been formulated," he added.

Fulton county members in the legislature have announced they will go over the proposed program and give it careful consideration, but C. Murphy Candler Jr., speaking for the DeKalb county delegation, vigorously opposed it.

DeKalb Apprehensive.
"I can speak for every member of the DeKalb delegation," he said. "The proposal would take away from DeKalb county a large part of its tax money and absolutely ruin the county school system. I seriously doubt that any bill concerning a merger and affecting DeKalb county will be introduced in the assembly. However, if it is, we will not lose any time killing it."

Mell Turner, another DeKalb representative, said:
"We will not permit them to do anything to break up DeKalb county. We have one of the best managed counties in the state and we purpose to keep it that way."

Various expressions came from members of the Atlanta city council.
Their condensed expressions follow:
COUNCILMAN GEORGE B. LYLE—"I am very much in favor of consolidation, but I believe a better plan would be a constitutional amendment creating the county of Atlanta out of the Greater Atlanta area. This area should be a 35-mile circle radiating from Little Five Points."

COUNCILMAN J. ALLEN COUCH—"What we should do is to create a county of Atlanta out of the metropolitan area, extending to near Bolton on the west, College Park on the south, Decatur on the east and Buckhead on the north, taking in all intervening territory. The rest of the county then could be divided among present neighboring counties."

ALDERMAN G. DAN BRIDGES—"I have an open mind. The plan has its good and bad points."

Carpenter Opposes.
ALDERMAN ROBERT CARPENTER—"I am unqualifiedly opposed to it."

COUNCILMAN CECIL W. HESTER—"I have an open mind. I have given the plan very little study."

COUNCILMAN CHARLES L. CHOSEWOOD—"I have not studied the consolidation plan, but I have an open mind on it. If it can be worked so taxpayers will benefit, I am for it."

ALDERMAN GILLIAM—"I am for anything that will save money, but will attempt to see that that portion of Atlanta living in DeKalb county is given equity."

COUNCILMAN JOHN A. WHITE—"If the plan is to take in all of the county, including all incorporated communities, I am for it 100 per cent."

Mayor Hartsfield and several members of council are out of the city and therefore could not comment.

North-South WPA Pay Difference Restricted to 25 Per Cent by House

Georgia's Tarver Wins Support From Both Sides of Chamber for His Amendment to Rectify Injustices to Dixie Workers.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Staff Correspondent.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The house today by a vote of 171 to 138 adopted the Tarver amendment to the $725,000,000 deficiency relief bill, which will eliminate the wide differential in WPA pay rates now existing between the south and the north.

Representative Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, author of the amendment, received support from both sides of the chamber, although Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the bill, and other Democratic leaders refused to vote for it. Woodrum, however, did say the amendment was meritorious but that it should not be adopted because it might interfere with the smooth administration of relief for the next few months and necessarily reduce the WPA pay roll.

In presenting his amendment, the Georgian told his colleagues there was no justification whatever for the present wide variation in the pay of WPA workers and that figures prepared by the Works Progress Administration proved this.

"This is not a sectional issue," he told his colleagues. "But a sincere effort to erase racial discriminations between the WPA pay received by unfortunates in one part or state of the union as against those in another part. The cost of living in one city should not vary more than 25 per cent from that of any other city, and my amendment does permit the Works Progress Administration to exceed this figure in their pay rolls in the south or any other section."

An effort by another Georgian, Representative Ramspeck, to amend the bill so that WPA would be blanketed within civil service was defeated by a voice vote of the house.

Referring to abuses in recent state primaries by WPA officials and money, Ramspeck warned the house that WPA could never be kept out of politics without the protection of civil service.

The Republicans and Conservative Democrats there are up-in-arms against the spending program.

The bill as it presently stands contains a provision preventing the administration from going through with an executive order blanketing WPA administrative employees into the civil service. The provision prohibits the use of WPA funds to pay employees so blanketed.

The chairman of the house civil service committee, Representative Ramspeck, Democrat, Georgia, tried to lift the ban but his amendment was shouted down by the opposition.

Representative Dirksen, Republican, Illinois, told the house its adoption would "freeze" the appointments of many WPA officials in Kentucky and Tennessee who, he said, had been "indicted" for political activity by the senate campaign expenditures committee.

Previously the speaker had announced the following:
Representative Frank Gross, of Stephens, vice chairman of the rules committee; Representative Henderson Lanham, of Floyd, chairman of the ways and means committee; Representative W. H. Key, of Jasper, chairman of the appropriations committee; Representative A. A. Marshall, of Macon, chairman of the temperance committee; Representative H. B. Edwards, of Lowndes, chairman of the state of the republic committee, and Representative Cleveland Rees, of Webster, chairman of the public welfare committee.

EXPANDED SCOUT PROGRAM URGED

Head of National Council
Speaks to 400 Members
From 11 Counties.

A plea for an expanded program of Scouting was voiced last night by Walter W. Head, president of the National Council, Boy Scouts of America, in an address before more than 400 Scouts and Scout leaders at the twenty-second annual meeting of the Atlanta Area Council.

The national president pointed out that boys and girls of the present generation are not inferior to those of previous generations, but explained the influences surrounding them are more affecting than formerly. He cited the influences of the motion picture, radio and other modern inventions.

New Officers.
W. D. Ellis III was re-elected president of the Atlanta council. Other officers who will serve with him are J. S. Roberts and Dr. Willis A. Sutton, vice presidents; J. W. Lea, secretary; Alva G. Maxwell, treasurer, and C. Graham Green, commissioner.

Members added to the board of directors are W. C. Wardlaw Jr., Rufus M. Darby, L. E. Mansfield, Ralph Ramsey, M. M. Rolleston, C. H. Mitchell, Leon D. Wofford and Mark Pope Jr.

In his address Head explained the imagination of young people developed to a greater extent today, demanding more from the Scouting program.

Three Atlanta leaders were presented the award of the silver highest honors in Scout work. It is based on distinguished service in boys' work.

Three Scoutmasters presented with Scoutmasters' keys for five years' service were John Grist, J. D. Clements and Eugene Anheier.

Wilkinson There.
Mell R. Wilkinson, first president of the Atlanta council and only man in the southeast to receive the coveted award of the buffalo, introduced the national president.

In making his annual report, Ellis pointed out that rapid progress had been made during the past year when 1,326 tenderlofts and 256 cubs were enrolled, making a total new enrollment of 1,582. He also revealed membership in the Atlanta council was 3,662—an all-time record.

Weaver Marr, Scout executive, also reported for the year, pointing out that rapid strides had been made in negro Scouting. A camp is now being planned in Gwinnett county, he said.

Scout leaders from 11 counties attended. Music was furnished by the Emory Glee Club quartet.

BRANDEIS IMPROVED.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(P)—Associate Justice Louis D. Brandeis, who has been ill for several days, was reported "well" tonight, hospital officials said.

and Charles A. Willbanks, 25, salesman, of 219 Roane street.

R. Ollie Adams, salesman who has traveled the county for 31 years for an Atlanta firm, last night was considering entering the race. A group called on him at his home, Lakewood avenue near Stewart avenue, and suggested his entry. It was said that the Black-hall district, in which he lives, never has been represented by a resident on the commission.

Jeffries yesterday set January 25 as the closing date for entries for the post made vacant in one of the most sudden developments in Fulton county political history.

Among those mentioned persistently as probable entries in a wide field of candidates are:

Walter B. Stewart, former chairman of the Fulton commission and former president of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia; J. Gordon Hardy, former president of the Georgia Peace Officers' Association, ex-president of the State Elks Association, and former chief deputy sheriff under the late James I. Lowry; former Councilman Ed Decker, who ran unsuccessfully against J. Walton Simmons for clerk of court; Alderman G. Dan Bridges, who made an unsuccessful race for the commission last year, and Dr. C. W. Childs, Grove Park pharmacist.

There were recurring reports yesterday that all of the candidates and hopefuls are counting the support of county employees, but that none of them as yet has an "inside track."

Refuse Resignation.
Commissioners yesterday at first refused to consider the Longino resignation, deciding to attempt to dissuade him from quitting his post. They also refused appealing to the directors of the Bank of Fulton County, who urged Longino to relinquish his position as commissioner and to devote his entire time to his duties as president of the institution. After considerable debate, it was decided such appeals would be useless, and the commission reconvened to accept the resignation.

Dr. Charles Ross Adams, who has been at political loggerheads with commission policies, dominated largely by Longino for the past several months, moved that the board accept the resignation "with regret."

On a roll call vote, every one of the commission expressed his regret at Longino's decision. They await Germany's decision on the specific cases as a test of her intentions with regard to American Jews.

Officials, on the basis of the two notes, believed tonight that Germany would settle the cases of American Jews who suffered damage or injury in recent outbreaks.

There was some difference of opinion, however, as to the interpretation Germany might place on the "treaty rights" mentioned in the note.

The DeKalb election will be held January 31, with closing of entry lists for candidates set for 3 o'clock Monday afternoon.

In announcing for the Longino position, Harrison said he has been a resident of Fulton county for 40 years, and that he is according to the opportunities of "my many friends."

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP
GAINS 960,000 IN '37
NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(P)—The Federal Council of Churches said today that membership in 248,410 churches increased by 960,000 in 1937, giving the United States a total of 64,156,895 church members.

The council, through its information service, said the 960,000 gain differed from the 750,000 gain reported by the Christian Herald because the figures had been rechecked and several small denominations added.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will love you to dance and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't want quiet girls. When they go to parties they want girls who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and means distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

People With More Money Than Manners, Are Often Inconsiderate

Public Opinion Governs Most of Our Relationships

By Caroline Chatfield.

I believe there's no surer test of a family's gentility, their innate sense of justice and kindness than is found in the way they treat their servants. People who take advantage of their position to make packhorses of household employees, piling on extra work without extra pay, asking special favors without granting special favors in return, trespassing on leisure time, those people have more money than manners; more gall than milk of human kindness. They don't know the meaning of Noblesse Oblige.

Public opinion puts the fear of God into us about our relationship in the business and professional world and nowadays there stands the government with the big stick to see that we don't overstep. But when we go home, close the door and let down our hair, what's in comes out and the servants get a load of what have we.

That is why we are instinctively respectful toward families that have had the same servants for a lifetime, and equally respectful toward the same servants. They couldn't have held their jobs if they hadn't been good and wouldn't have held them if the householders hadn't been good. The mere fact that they have stuck to each other through the years is proof in plenty that the one has been gracious and generous and the other reasonable, obliging and loyal. I know a lot of privileged people who prize friendship with their servants as they prize friendship with their peers.

All of which comes up in connection with a plaintive letter from a young girl in the middle west. "I took a job," she writes, "of general housework with a well-to-do family because it was the only one open to me. I expected hard work and don't mind it but the personal favors that every member of the family asks of me are breaking me down. The girls want finger-waves and they have the nerve to complain if they don't look like beauty shop waves."

"The Old Maid" To Be Made By Warners

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 13.—"The Old Maid" has finally come to town at the Warner Brothers studio. The Zoe Atkins play, which starred Judith Anderson and Helen Menken on Broadway, was purchased by Paramount for $50,000 more than three years ago. Claudette Colbert was the first of a long line of glamour girls to turn down the leading role. It remained for Bette Davis to signify her willingness to play top spot—which is how Warners came to buy "The Old Maid" from Paramount. In addition to paying $75,000, Warners will lend Pat O'Brien to Paramount for a one-picture deal. The other woman in the case is Miriam Hopkins. This picture will probably precede the other five or six epics awaiting Miss Davis when she returns from her four-week vacation in the desert.

Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, and Joan Crawford have been put down for Metro's "Sweepstakes," to be produced by Louis Lighton, the lead responsible for "Test Pilot" and "Captain Courageous." Plans for a third "Kildare" are under way. Robert Montgomery's next will definitely be "Maiden Voyage," for which Luise Rainer was wanted—but she declined. Maybe Dolly Haas will get the role. "World Cruise," will use up the rest of those pictures he took on his honeymoon cruise with the beautiful Helga. (First batch went into "Trade Winds.") The Roach family is well represented in "Captain Fury." Papa Hal Roach directs, Sonny Hal Jr. assists him, and Daughter Margaret gets her first important acting chore. (She had to prove herself in other studios before her father consented to further her career.)

Fay Bainter has top spot in "Fly Away Home," to be megaphoned by Michael Curtiz. Verree Teasdale makes one picture before leaving with Hubby Adolphe Menjou for South America—in "Beau Geste," playing the role enacted by Alice Joyce in the silent version. Ernst Lubitsch receives $200,000 from Metro for two pictures he direct for the studio.

Glady's George leaves for Broadway and a play—in hopes of getting another career-booster. Hollywood has neglected her sadly (although she is said to have a decent part in "I'm From Missouri," which stars Bob Burns). Metro is bidding for the win Shaw play, "Gentle People," which stars Sylvia Sydney and Franchot Tone. The offer includes the two stars. . . . The Fitzpatrick Travelogues for 1939 will all have American backgrounds.

Paramount is shaving its contract list in a big sweep of economy. The talent school has gone and most of the stock players. I would have put these last on the list. Where is Hollywood to get its next batch of stars if the training grounds are abolished?

Lee Bowman, who was once reported in love with Ida Lupino, will play her boy friend in "Old Mrs. Leonard and Her Machine Gun." (Ida is now Mrs. Louis Hayward.) Incidentally, Miss Lupino and her mate have been offered $80,000, tax free and with transportation paid, to make a picture together in England. You bet they'll accept. . . . Gregory La Cava directs Ginger Rogers in "She Said I Do." (Mr. La Cava's last chore with Ginger was the successful "Stage Door.")

Both Dick Powell and wife, Joan Blondell, who swore to high heaven that neither would sign a picture contract until after a long vacation, have changed their minds. Joan has promised to play the lead in Universal's "East Side of Heaven" with Bing Crosby. Dick has signed with Metro to take over the roles once given to Alan Jones.

A. Serve only a small portion at a time, which may be included as a part of the meal with which he is familiar and likes.

Q. What can be done to correct a 3-year-old child who has the habit of wetting the bed?

A. First consult your physician and let him give the child a careful examination. If no physical cause is found, the following training should be started at once: Fluids should not be given in large amounts after 5 p. m.; night clothes that are irritating, tight or too warm, and covers that are excessively heavy, should be avoided; the bladder should be emptied

Your Inability to See in the Dark May Be Caused by Not Drinking Milk

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you have trouble finding a seat in a dark theater, it might be a good idea to check your diet for the vitamin A-rich foods. Unless your body has stored up this vitamin in sufficient amounts, the retina in the back of the eyes cannot adjust easily to changes of light and dark.

Preposterous as it may sound, the inability to see in the dark may be caused by the failure to drink your milk, eat your carrots—or to include in your diet other such rich vitamin A sources such as cream, egg yolk, spinach, or cod liver oil.

This and other fascinating new developments along nutritional lines were discussed by Dr. Helga S. Mitchell, director of Home Economics Research at Massachusetts State College when she spoke recently at the meeting of the Greater New York Dietetic Association. Dr. Mitchell is considered one of the foremost authorities on nutritional research and her talk brings us right up to date on our vitamins and minerals.

Dr. Mitchell expressed the opinion that while vitamin A appears to be increasingly important to eyesight, it seems to have been overemphasized as a cold preventive. Other vitamins, particularly C with its healing properties, have considerable bearing on cold prevention.

Vitamin C is important for other reasons. . . . It is now listed along with calcium and phosphorus as an important factor in the health of the teeth. You will keep your teeth longer if you get your vitamin C foods—citrus fruits and juices, tomatoes, lettuce and raw cabbage.

You will be interested to know that not only are calcium and phosphorus needed in children's diets to make strong bones, but manganese must be present in adequate amounts to allow the bones to attain their natural length.

As nutritional research goes on, we are more and more impressed by the far-reaching influence of these important food elements. Dr. Mitchell reports that both vitamin C and vitamin B are now under observation for the part they play in the lack of them—play in anemia! Usually anemia is associated with an iron deficiency.

Then there's vitamin B, which figures so importantly in the muscular functioning of the heart. . . . It may be more than a coincidence that heart disease occurs most frequently in the older persons—the one whose diet is most apt to be seriously lacking in vitamin B. Even the average diet is easily deficient in this vitamin, and as we grow older and get into a rut in our way of eating, there is a tendency to eat less of the whole grain cereals and breads which supply it most liberally.

Another very interesting point brought out by Dr. Mitchell is the increased need for vitamins in cases of thyroid deficiency, as shown by experiments conducted by Dr. J. R. Murlin, of the University of Rochester. The person with a thyroid deficiency is apt to lean toward overweight and to a diet shy in vitamins, whereas the deficiency seems to make it more than necessary that these elements be included.

There are so many new developments in nutrition that we can't keep up with them, but it is reassuring to know that the body's needs are met by the balanced diet which includes milk, fresh fruits, vegetables, whole grain cereal and bread, butter and cheese. Be sure that your diet is mainly composed of these foods—they are your best assurance of health.

Ladies, Here's That Diary Again!

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin.

Monday—Leonardo da Vinci was an interior decorator among other things and undertook the decorating of many noble homes. He was also quite a plumber for his day and age and had a lot of ideas on the subject. He installed a very fancy sanitary system in one ducal palace in Milan, then when he was at work on "The Last Supper" was often called away by the Duchess to repair her plumbing.

Tuesday—The newest closet idea I've encountered is this—a room that sorely needs extra shelf or hanging space. If there's a window in the center of a wall, fine—not a Venetian blind on it; if there's not a window—just hang up the blind anyway. But either way have the blind hung at least a foot inside the room, so as to have a recessed effect which gives space at either side for shallow closet or shelves. Over them you have an imposing drapery and the whole business would look like a fine big window.

Wednesday—Spent the day making cushions for the answer-to-my prayer, a chaise longue—very nice it is, too, even though it is one my sister was discarding. I've made a new cover of French blue and it impresses me, at least. One cushion I made out of an old party dress of pink crepe with old rose velvet ruffles on the berth (vintage 1934). The other two cushions were made from the strap bag too—one pale blue, the other new navy blue with bow of blue and rose ribbon tied together, then stitched flat to the cushion top. Very pretty, if I do say so myself.

Thursday—Here's news—if you don't have enough wall plugs for your electric fixtures, you don't have to wait till the budget will permit ripping up the walls to put in more. Now there's a new arrangement that can be run along the baseboard, like the telephone wire, so you can have a plug whenever you need it. Very neat, too—you hardly see it.

Friday—I ran onto a sale of glassware the other day so I stocked up with enough to last me the rest of my life—or at least a good long time. What a relief it will be not to have to dish-wash punch cups between rounds! I also have enough sherberts to serve as many as I'll ever be entertaining at one time. As for water glasses, well, we won't be down to the last one anytime soon (as we have been in the past a time or two)—it's like having an extra light globe around the place.

Saturday—Saw an exotic effect achieved with an unpainted cabinet. On the doors, fantastic fort-telling cards were glued all over it like tiles, then shellacked. The rest of the piece was painted turquoise blue.

Sunday—The minister's family are coming for dinner today so I must fly around and see that everything is just so. We're having ham baked with pineapple juice, egg nog ice cream and the last of our holiday fruit cake. And into the bargain there's little boy blue to be kept amused in bed where he's sentenced for a cold. The greeting cards and old wrapping from Christmas ought to hold him for a while.

MY DAY Need for Rural Doctors Stressed

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON.—I was grieved to hear of the death of Herman Oliphant, a truly devoted public servant. Many of his associates and friends will feel his loss deeply.

We held the opening meeting here yesterday afternoon for the women's committee, which is organizing a campaign for the development of the fight against infantile paralysis. I was enormously impressed by the fact that representative women had come from so many far-away states to attend this meeting. A few minutes before a majority of my guests appeared for tea, Dr. Harriet McGraw, from North Platte, Neb., came in and I had an opportunity to talk to her about her work in a rural county where she is the only doctor. When she first moved into the area it was generally said, "Oh, well, wait until winter, she will never be able to handle the work," but winter came and she accomplished the apparently impossible and met every call.

She is no longer young, and I am wondering who will follow in her footsteps. It is becoming increasingly difficult to find doctors for rural areas, I understand, and I feel that we ought to bend our energies toward getting groups of doctors together in counties where they will have a little central unity. In that way they can all avail themselves of each other's services and, instead of duplicating laboratory work, they can share one laboratory and modern machinery now needed by doctors.

The infantile paralysis work has convinced me that, if one could get these doctors who work in regions where they have very little chance for consultation, together on definite days, it would help in keeping up with modern developments in medicine and give the patients the opportunity for consultation not otherwise possible.

Last night I went to see Noel Coward's play, in which Beatrice Lillie plays an important part. She is always amusing and clever. The scene where the amateurs put on a show is reminiscent of many such efforts I have lived through and none can see it without being amused and entertained. On the whole, I do not feel that this is one of the best of Noel Coward's plays, though I may be wrong in my judgment, for I was rather weary last night, and perhaps not as equal to entertainment as I should have been.

I have spent a most interesting morning going through the Bureau of Home Economics in the Department of Agriculture. This is, I think, the third time I have seen some of the work which they are doing and each time I see new things. It is ridiculous to see so much in such a short time, but by going again and again I think I am receiving a fair picture of what this department has to offer the people of the country. I hope that the members of my press conference who met there this morning will be able to familiarize a great number of people with the services which can be called upon if the people desire to use them.

"Children Are People," Says Doctor

By Dr. William Brady.

From the moment the cord is cut and the first spanking is given (I hope it is so in "The Birth of a Baby"), until the young American splits his or her ticket several ways to vote for the right candidate, there is always the hazard of pediatrics.

A pediatricist is a doctor who purports to be especially skilled in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases of children.

The grave fault with specialism today is that we have no general standard of qualification for specialists, no particular requirements the doctor must fulfill in order to become a full-fledged specialist in any field he fancies. Provided he has a license to practice medicine and surgery he may, at any time he desires, close up the old shop tonight, move into newly appointed offices perhaps in a more exclusive location, and tomorrow morning begin practice as a specialist with "Practice Limited to Diseases of Children."

I have great respect for a real specialist. That is a doctor who has proved his ability in his particular line to the satisfaction of his medical colleagues, who call upon him for counsel when they encounter difficult or unusual cases. If I understood what Webster says about it, many of the specialists competing with general practitioners for the patronage of the public today are quacks in ethical clothing. This applies not only to child specialists but to every other kind in the galaxy improved and fostered by the oligarchy of the A. M. A.

The specialist paid in this country has a good deal to do with the growing conviction that good medical service is too costly for the average family. Well, what can you expect when a snobbish little woman engages to pay a pediatricist $10 a month for advice on the care and feeding of the baby, which if she had any sense, she could buy from any plain family doctor for $2 or get in any of a dozen pamphlets on infant care for a dime?

Ever since I began warning the public against the devices practiced and the false pretensions made by charlatans, in pursuance of my duty as prescribed by Section 3, Chapter IV, of the Principles of Medical Ethics promulgated by the American Medical Association, my stocks have been extremely low with the clique of politicians who have gained control of that great body of yes-men.

Prior to the dictatorship for some 15 years of it I had the most cordial co-operation from every department of the A. M. A., in my newspaper work. When I called public attention to Section 5 of Chapter III of the Principles of Medical Ethics, which declares that "it is unprofessional to receive remuneration from patients for surgical instruments or medicine," the headquarters' indignation was prodigious—and at the very next annual meeting of the A. M. A. the yeomen resolved that the time has come to revise this embarrassing code the medical fathers bequeathed us.

Vitamin E. Is there a vitamin E and if so, what are its benefits? (Mrs. J. M.) Answer: Yes. Possibly it promotes fertility in animals. Whether it has any essential value for man is still undetermined.

Gibson Girlish Design

By Barbara Bell

We think that famous lady, the Gibson girl, for the spool-waisted blouse-and-skirt fashion that is slated for greater popularity than ever in spring. It's not a surprising fact, because this is such a flattering style, with its blouse that really blouses, its full sleeves, tiny waist, and button-front, decidedly flaring skirt.

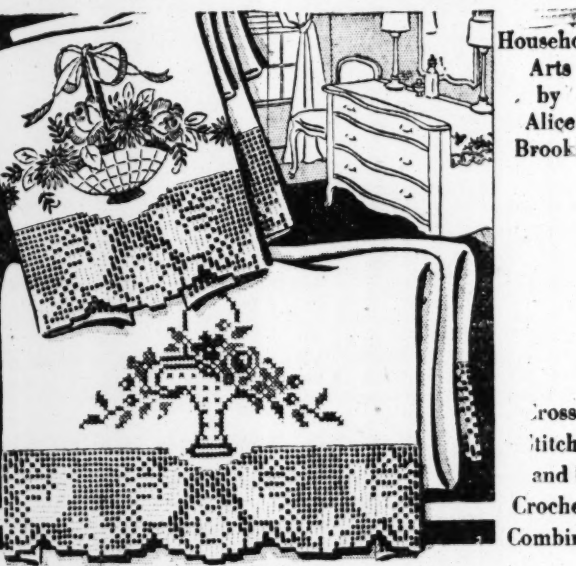

This blouse-with-skirt fashion is a practical one, also. It's smart right now with your fur jacket or long coat, and excellent for spring wear, with no coat at all. You can make it with a flat crepe or broadcloth skirt and chiffon or georgette blouse, if you want it to look rather dressy. And with a tweed or flannel skirt, and linen or flat crepe blouse, if you want it to look more tailored. In the summer, repeat it in cottons.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1539-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires 1 7/8 yards of 39-inch material for the blouse. Two yards of 54-inch material for the skirt.

Price of pattern 15 cents. Do not send stamps.

Alix Leaves for Home With Don, Nancy; Kurt Oversleeps and Misses the Train

By Margaret Gorman Nichols.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Alix Barton is only 18 when her father, a clergyman in a small Maryland town, dies suddenly and her semi-invalid mother soon follows him. She goes to Baltimore and by sacrifice and study finds herself a secretary. She meets a tramp steamer. After two years she meets a man, a motherly social worker and they are very happy in their housekeeping arrangements. Alix likes Eddie Barrett, whose family until recently, was wealthy but who is now working for $25 a week. He takes her to a party given by Don Lawrence and his debutante daughter, Nancy, where she meets Kurt Deering and on the instant falls in love with him. Kurt makes a date for dinner two nights later. When Eddie asks how he "stands with" her she says he is her bet friend next to Tuck, who she doesn't love him. Her employer becomes infatuated with a new girl and Alix, fearing demotion or discharge, resigns. She has a very happy evening with Kurt, who is attracted by Alix but can't forget Gina Rowland, the beautiful actress who jilted him. Don asks Alix to another party and offers her a job. Don returns, down and out and embittered. Don kisses her but apologizes when she says she must quit her job. Don takes Alix to New York on business. Nancy goes to the airport to take her home early. Alix feels that Kurt is falling in love with her. In the last he puts his arm around her. Alix sees Gina. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT X.

"Alix?" Gina asked, her eyes and voice curious.

"Alix Barton. A girl from home. Friend of Don and Nancy Lawrence's. You've met them. We've had quite a night."

"Will you be here long?"

"Going back tomorrow."

Gina said, "Oh, that's too bad. Don't go back tomorrow."

He left them after a few minutes. And Alix, seeing him cross the room to her, thought, "I know when I see him close if he still cares for her. She's so beautiful. He can't help but be conscious of how beautiful she is and he can't help but remember what they were to each other until a year ago."

"Sorry to keep you waiting, Alix," he said and smiled. "Now our eggs and coffee are cold. We'll get another order."

He tried to be as he had been before Gina came in but Alix knew he was disturbed. They left, took a taxi to the hotel, and he went up with her as far as the hotel room.

"See you at breakfast," he said, "and we'll all go back on the same train."

She forced a smile. "Thank you for another lovely evening, Kurt." A perfect evening—spoiled! How detached he was now!

"Good night, Alix."

Nancy had left the lamp on the night table burning. Coming in she saw the light. Alix realized how tired she was, how aching and disappointed and—afraid.

Nancy stirred, opened her eyes, and sat up.

"You didn't get home until morning after all, did you?" she asked. "Sit down and tell me all about it. Father and I were just so much excess baggage and I couldn't bear it. He went to bed, too. Must be a sign of something."

Nancy said, "He saw Gina last night. That's what's wrong."

He looked directly at Alix. "Well, we can't starve because Kurt saw his lost love, can we? I know that two would get together again."

And Alix knew he was glad Kurt had seen Gina!

Later her eyes flew from one tall figure to another in the great station. Don seemed restless and anxious. She knew he was looking at her furtively. The things they were not saying to each other, Alix thought miserably! She knew that Don was thinking, "If Kurt has gone back to Gina, there'll be no body between Alix and me except young Eddie who is too poor to count."

when Don Lawrence goes to bed at 10 in New York.

Alix looked at her steadily. "Gina Rowland came into a restaurant where we were."

Nancy's smiling mouth relaxed. "Oh! Did he?"

"She sent for him and he went over to her table and talked to her. She was with some other people. I felt I knew his thoughts—before then. Then he—she closed up like a book. I don't know what he was thinking. She's so beautiful, Nancy."

"I wonder if he'll..."

"He said he'd meet us for breakfast and go back with us. If he doesn't, I'll know that he—she went back to her."

Nancy shook her disheveled brown head. "I don't believe he will. He's too strong for that."

Alix said, "The mind is strong but the flesh is weak. You see, it wasn't the Gina sitting in a restaurant with another man that disturbed him particularly. When he looked at her, he was remembering what they had been to each other two years ago when they were first in love. Nothing she's done to him has made him forget their happy moments. I can't compete with his memories of her."

"I won't like him if he goes back to her. Will you?"

Alix temples throbbed. We were on the crest of the hill, climbing upward, you and I, Kurt. "I don't know," she said quietly. "Love makes a fool out of the strong as well as the weak."

They met Don in the lobby the next morning. But Kurt was not there.

"We'll wait around awhile," Don said. He looked at Alix. "You shouldn't have kept him out so late last night. And you looked tired this morning."

Tired for not sleeping, she thought, for wondering if he had gone back to the restaurant last night and for visualizing Kurt and Gina together again. Tired from reliving the perfect part of last night when he had held her more closely and more tenderly as the hours passed, and when in Washington Square he had kissed her fingers and said tender things and her hopes had taken wings. "I'll call him," Don said. "It isn't like Kurt to stand you up."

He came back after a few minutes and said, "No answer. But he knows what train we're getting so we'll probably run into him at the station." Then, frowning, he asked, "Nothing wrong, is there? You two are pretty quiet about something."

Nancy said, "He saw Gina last night. That's what's wrong."

He looked directly at Alix. "Well, we can't starve because Kurt saw his lost love, can we? I know that two would get together again."

And Alix knew he was glad Kurt had seen Gina!

Later her eyes flew from one tall figure to another in the great station. Don seemed restless and anxious. She knew he was looking at her furtively. The things they were not saying to each other, Alix thought miserably! She knew that Don was thinking, "If Kurt has gone back to Gina, there'll be no body between Alix and me except young Eddie who is too poor to count."

But Don and Nancy and Alix had left. He did not have time to get to the station.

Breakfasting by the window, looking down upon Fifth avenue, he thought of Gina. And as Alix has said, it was not the Gina of last night that had slipped her cool brown hand into his of whom he thought but of the laughing Gina of two years ago who had loved him passionately. He had tried to build a wall between himself and his memories but this morning he knew that the wall had been made of flimsy stuff. He had loved her so. He had never loved any one else. Memories—Gina in his arms, her soft, warm mouth against his, her lovely voice saying, "Oh, Kurt, I love you so terribly," and the places they had been together...

He thought, "She loved me. I know that." Perhaps she loved him still and regretted what had happened. Last night, despite the lightness of her voice, her eyes had asked eager questions. He was ready to forgive her. Don't be a sap. Don't be a fool. She threw you down for a man with more money and then didn't marry him after all. She humiliated you and put you through hell. But last night—last night she had said, "Don't go back tomorrow."

The phone rang. He let it ring for a few minutes and then picked it up.

"You didn't go back!" Gina cried delightedly. "I was so afraid you had."

"Hello, Gina. I didn't go back because I overslept."

Then she said, "Please come to see me today, Kurt. You slept but I didn't. I was miserable. You'll have to bend your pride to come, know... after all that happened. But you see, there are so many things you don't know. You wouldn't let me explain that last night. You were so angry..."

Frowning, he thought, "No matter how much you tell yourself you won't go, you will. You'll hate yourself but you'll go just the same."

Gina said, "I've got to see you, darling! There's so much I have to say to you. Please."

That afternoon her maid opened the door of her new apartment and she stepped inside.

Gina was wearing a gray tailored suit, a black blouse, and a large diamond pin in the collar of the blouse. Her small black hat, black gloves, and black bag lay on a chair beside the magnificent silver foxes. She looked slim and perfect as always, he thought.

The living room had lemon-colored walls and a deep green rug. The furniture was modern. Venetian blinds were drawn to the sill, shutting out the bright afternoon sun, making the room dim and cool and intimate. It was a perfect setting for Gina; she knew all about perfect settings.

"Aren't you glad you overslept, Kurt? Please say you're glad."

"But I don't think I am, Gina."

Liar! He was glad. Had she been crying? He knew how her eyes looked when she had been crying. She seemed a little nervous.

The sat on the brown divan and the maid brought in cocktails. A new maid, he noted. She never kept them long. And for some time she asked questions about what he had been doing and the people he had been seeing. When he talked, her eyes searched his eyes and he knew she wasn't listening, wasn't interested and that she was asking questions just to make conversation.

"How was Havana?" he asked finally.

"Oh, marvelous. Amusing people and yachts and parties. Gambling and the races. You know." Then slowly her black eyes, avoiding him until now, looked into his. "Do you hate me, Kurt? I had to see you to tell you about Russell Emory, why I didn't marry him. Oh, I know it was a year ago but..."

"I'd rather not hear about that, Gina. Confess it to somebody else, if confession will make you feel better." A man doesn't want to hear about his successor. He knew Emory, rich and middle-aged, and for a month last year the thought of Gina in Emory's arms had been like a knife through him.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP)—After giving promise of a third successive rally, the cotton market ran into a little selling late in today's session and closed 2 1/2 points lower.

Buying and selling was approximately in balance after prices had yielded their early gains of 5 to 10 points in the near months, in which there was some trade price fixing.

There was some selling of contracts by southern sources and also foreign liquidation in new crop positions. The spread between March and October, nearly 100 points early in the week, narrowed to 89 points at today's close.

Trading interest, particularly on the part of professional operators who were in restraint because of desire to learn more about federal action with respect to the cotton program.

Worth Street business was quiet in most lines of cotton goods. Observers reported the most encouraging feature of the market was the apparent firmness of prices.

MURPHY INDORSED BY FORD OFFICIAL AS FAIR AND ABLE

Given Second Confirmation After Appearance in Which He Condemns Sit-Down Strike Tactics

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(UP) Attorney General Frank Murphy today condemned the sit-down strike as an instrument of labor policy and read a letter to a senate judiciary subcommittee in which he was governor of Michigan, while he was governor of Michigan, was praised by a high official of the Ford Motor Company.

Appearing at his own request before the subcommittee which already had approved his nomination, and did so again when he concluded, the red-haired "baby" member of President Roosevelt's cabinet said that the sit-down has been "thoroughly discredited" and that "we have seen an end of it."

Murphy presented a letter from Harry H. Bennett, Ford personnel director, commending the President's choice of the former governor as a cabinet official. Bennett described Murphy as a "man who completely understands the requirements of the employee and those of the employer."

Murphy said that he had received the letter, which was unsolicited, yesterday.

Murphy said the committee for permission to appear after his nomination was subjected to severe criticism, especially by Representative Hoffman, a Michigan Republican and long a political and personal foe of the former governor. Hoffman charged his fire on Murphy's policy during the 1937 automobile sit-down strikes.

The Ford letter said that "regardless of what expressed opinion may have been, we personally have always felt that your actions were guided and prompted by a spirit of fairness and justice."

It further described him as a man "who can distinguish between the rights of capital and the demands of labor, who can recognize the justice in the claims of each and mediate between them."

Murphy explained to the committee that he had never "condemned" the sit-down strike or "countenanced disobedience of a court order."

"But I conceived it to be my duty as governor to see that the laws are executed in the manner best calculated in my judgment to serve the original and the ultimate purpose of all laws—to preserve public order and ensure public safety," he said.

Happy Officers Are Installed by Convention Bureau

Atlanta's Experts on Conventions Put on a Big One of Their Own

300 'Delegates' to 26th Annual Banquet of Tourist Bureau Hear Abit Nix Call Work a Sound Investment That Pays Atlantans Well.

Atlanta demonstrated its ability to entertain any and all conventions by staging a "convention" of its own last night at the Henry Grady hotel, the occasion being the twenty-sixth annual banquet of the Atlanta Convention and Visitors' Bureau.

More than 300 "delegates," representing a majority of the business, professional and commercial firms of the city, crowded the Dixie ballroom, watched the installation of new officers of the organization, listened attentively to the principal address by Abit Nix, Athens attorney, but in the main gave themselves over to the fraternalism and good-fellowship that is the keynote of every convention.

Atlanta Sets Pace. Pointing out that Atlanta, as the metropolitan center of the south, sets the pace for the development of the state and southeast, Mr. Nix declared the type of service rendered by the convention bureau was such that it should have the hearty co-operation of all citizens of Atlanta inasmuch as it was an investment which returned benefits to every resident of the metropolitan area.

"For many years I have insisted that this state has many scenic, historic and climatic reasons not only for the general tourists, but the various conventions held annually in our country," Mr. Nix said.

"Every year an increasing number of American families take to the highways and as they travel they enrich the American merchant and businessman along the way. Recognizing this fact many of our southern states recently have begun a campaign to make the people of other sections conscious of the advantages of the deep south."

Means Money to City. "It is tremendously important, not only for Atlanta but Georgia, that this organization function with the highest state of efficiency," Mr. Nix stressed that at least 50,000 persons attended more than 200 conventions last year and called attention to the program of the bureau for the current year which insures the attendance of more than 100,000 persons at conventions here during 1939, the aggregate revenue being estimated at more than $2,500,000.

Reviewing the accomplishments of the bureau during the last few years, Mr. Nix cited the growth in membership and income and called attention to the fact that the organization had been able to function efficiently despite the fact it operated on a budget lower, by comparison, than for any other city of its size.

"I am sure that it would not be out of place for me, as a citizen of the state of Georgia," he said, "to congratulate Atlanta upon the wonderful work being done by the officers of the Atlanta Convention and Visitors' Bureau, particularly your executive vice president, Faber A. Bollinger. His name has become a household word not only in Atlanta but throughout the state."

Members. Preceding the installation of officers, a brief greeting was extended to the members of the organization by Governor Rivers, who was attending another function at the hotel.

Taking office, following induction ceremonies conducted by Judge Paul S. Etheridge, of the Fulton superior court, were A. L. Belle Isle, president; Mike Benton, vice president; A. L. Zachary, secretary, and Mr. Bollinger, executive vice president. W. V. Crowley, treasurer of the organization, was not present.

Entertainment features consisted of selections by Eleanor Hodges and her all-string ensemble; Patricia Makinson, soprano soloist; and Kenneth Whittington, violinist.

Among the guests of honor were Mayor Pro Tem. Dan Bridges, Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor of Druid Hills Baptist church and chairman of the World Baptist Alliance; Dr. William V. Gardner, pastor of First Presbyterian church; Colonel E. J. Paxson, a past president of the convention bureau and retiring officers of the organization.

STRIKE IS CALLED ON STATE BUILDING Work on $800,000 Office Structure Held Up by Unions.

A strike by 155 union workers yesterday halted construction of the state's new $800,000 office building opposite the capitol. Union leaders said the men quit their posts because the electrical contract had been awarded to a non-union company.

The Mion Construction Company, general contractors, said all subcontractors, except the electrical work, had been given to firms employing union men. The company ordered the men back to work by Monday. Meanwhile, work of bailing out water went on. Heavy rains on Thursday night and yesterday filled several excavations, the company said.

The new building is being built with state and PWA money and officials of the Mion company said yesterday that the union wage scale, required by the PWA, was being paid to all workers.

The contract calls for completion of the building by April 1. Officials said an attempt would be made to settle the differences today.

The advance reflected wholesale price increases for building materials, leather products, foods and fuel. The department's all-commodity index now is 71.0 per cent of the 1926 average, 0.1 per cent below a month ago and 4.7 per cent below a year ago.

ATLANTA AUTHORS HONORED AT DINNER

Druid Hills Baptist Church Meeting Follows Novel Entertainment.

"Present-day life offers a challenge for vital books to be written," Dr. John L. Hill, of Nashville, member of the Baptist Sunday School Board, said last night at a "book night" in the Druid Hills Baptist church.

Dr. Hill, himself a well-known writer, editor and book reviewer, was principal speaker at a novel affair arranged by Dr. Louie D. Newton, pastor, to "acquaint church people with Atlanta's authors."

Jackets for Decoration. A dinner was served, with the table decorated in an original manner from jackets of books of the writers attending and a meeting, open to the public, was held after the dinner.

Besides bringing Atlanta writers before Atlantans, the affair honored Mrs. W. B. Suddeth, a member of Dr. Newton's church, who recently edited the "Atlanta Argosy," an anthology of Atlanta poets, including Frank L. Stanton, whose verse for years was a feature of The Constitution.

Mrs. Suddeth presided at the meeting, during which Dr. Hill spoke on "Books Point the Way." He stressed the fact that modern authors "offer a wonderful opportunity for authors to reflect that life between pages of books."

A feature of the meeting was the reading of poetic works by Atlanta poets, and the singing of poems set to music, by the church choir.

Atlanta authors present included Harry Lee, Glenn B. Rainey, Lola Pergament, Mrs. Lila Wilson, Turner, Mrs. Maud L. Elton, M. E. Coleman, Dr. Elmer J. Campbell, Miss Mavis Garey, Miss Gladys Lewis, Marshall Walker Jr., Miss Mildred Clark, Miss Erva Blackstock, Mrs. Ludie B. Jones, David E. Unger, Mrs. Dolores A. Dalton, Dr. James P. Routh, Mrs. E. H. Hartcock, Mrs. Clara Lundie A. Vogel, Mrs. Samuel Inman Cooper, Mrs. Agnes Kendrick Gray, James E. Warren and J. R. McCain.

The press was represented by Ralph T. Jones, Ralph McGill and Miss Lillie Mae Robinson, of The Constitution, and Mrs. Medora F. Perkins, of the Atlanta Journal.

Notable as guests included Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, and Dr. Earl E. Pierce, Mrs. Pierce and Miss Electa Pierce, all of Minneapolis.
